CELEBRATION WAS A SUCCESS.

NOT A MISHAP TO MAR THE FUN
AND FROLIC OF THE DAY.

Every Event Carried out as Advertised on the Program and Everybody Goes Home Feeling that he has been Royally Entertained.—Perfect Weather all Day.—Everybody in Gala Costume.

The celebration in this city on the Fourth engineered by the Eagles was a success from every point of view.
The city was crowded with visitors
the entire day, starting in at early morning and lasting until late at night, and the weather was exceptionally fine all day. The city was gaily dressed in bunting and flags and everybody seemed to be determined to have a good time, and so far as can be learned, they all succeeded.

The program started in the morning with the floral and industrial parade. It was thought that merchants and others might not take enough interest in this feature to make it a success, but it was found that this was not the case for there was a good turnout, both of rigs decorated with flowers and those with industrial exhibits. Some of the rigs were very pretty and others unique in their get up, and with the band, military company and fire companies in their neat uniforms, it was indeed a brave showing. Both sides of the streets were lined with people to see this feature of the day, and all united in pronouncing it many times better than they had expected to see.

The reproduction of the bombardment of Santiago was mostly noise,
but as the glorification of the Fourth depends largely on this for its completeness, this feature filled the bill to perfection.

The drill by Company A of Marshfield was witnessed by a large number of people, and as the boys gave a first class exhibition in every respect, it was appreciated by all.

At precisely twelve o'clock the whistle of the electric light plant blew several short blasts and everybody who was not out on the game thought that a fire had broken out. It proved to be only the signal for the fire run, however, and the west side fire department came down Cranberry street at a gait that was rapid enough to suit

the most exacting. The time of making the run from where the alarm sounded to throwing a stream was one minute and forty-five seconds.

This ended the morning's entertainment and an intermission was taken until 1:45 in the afternoon, when Messrs. Davis and Arpin raced at the fair grounds with their automobiles.
This was won by Mr. Davis, he making the two miles in six minutes and seven seconds. This part of the program was liked very much by those interested in automobiles.

The track events at the fair grounds
were as follows:
120 yard low hurdles—Crawford,
first; Fosgate, second; LaSarge, third.
Time 13 seconds.

Running high jump—Crawford,
first; LaSarge, second; Fosgate, third.
Distance, 5 feet.

100 yard dash—Crawford, first; La-Sarge, second; Fosgate, third. Time, 10 4-5 seconds.

Throwing the 12 pound hammer—
Crawford, first; Fosgate, second; F.
Jenkins, third. Distance, 120 ft. 1 in.

Throwing the discus—Crawford, first; Fosgate, second; F. Jenkins, third. Distance, 107 ft. 3 in.

From the above it will be seen that Earl Crawford took first in all the events. The totals are as follows:
Crawford, 25; Fosgate, 11; LaSarge,
7; Jenkins, 2.

Following the athletic sports there was a ball game between Marshfield and Grand Rapids, which resulted in a victory for the home boys by a score of 10 to 6.

During this time there was a vande-ville entertainment at the opera house which was also well attended. The Gun club was also holding its tournament during the day, at which there were some twenty shooters in attendance, the details of which are given elsewhere.

The east side fire company made their run at six o'clock, and altho no track was kept of the time they made,
it was done in short order, the new team recently purchased being a fast one.

The event that was waited for with the most anxiety was the balloon ascension, and as the ballonist had failed to make good last year, it was thought by some that this year's performance would be a repetition of what had gone before. This was not the case, however, and when the crowd assembled near the opera house they found the ballonist busily engaged in getting the huge bag filled with hot air.
This was accomplished about half past six and a very pretty ascension was made, altho quite a heavy breeze was blowing.

Prof. Starloe, who was to ride the high ladder with his bicycle, lost his nerve for some reason or other, either thru having imbibed too much river water, or else from being out in the hot sun too long, and was unable to do his act. This was remedied, however, by securing a young fellow from Hall's circus, who did the turn to perfection.

In the evening there was a band concert, a dance at the opera house and a performance in the tent show on the west side, all of which were well attended, which ended the day's entertainment.

There was probably one of the largest crowds ever seen in the city, between four and five hundred coming from Marshfield alone, and something like a hundred from Stevens Point. Those who were here united in pronouncing the day and celebration perfect in all respects, the entire program being carried out to the letter, and as there were no accidents to mar the pleasure of the day, everybody went home well pleased with the Eagles and the people in general.

Gun Club Tournament.

The Grand Rapids gun club held its annual tournament on the Fourth of July. There were some noted shooters in attendance, there being two ex-state champions and the present state champion. The ex-champions were Marshfield and Shultz of Tomah, and the present state champion is Johnson of Tomah.

A heavy wind blew all day and made some very hard targets to hit,
but in spite of this some fair good scores were made. Ten events were shot according to the program, and following are the scores:

Work is Delayed.

The river came up to the seven foot mark again last week and the consequence was that the cofferdams of the Consolidated people were overflowed and work had to be stopped on a part of the dam. As the cofferdams were all strong enough to hold the weight of water on them a great deal of damage was averted.

The cofferdam across the Grand Chute throws nearly all the water thru the channel on the east side and the consequence is that rocks that suck several feet out of water have since been covered with a raging torrent. While it has made a very pretty sight to look at for the uninterested observer, it probably has not proved so entertaining for those in-

DONT WANT ANY MORE SALOONS.

THAT WAS THE WILL OF THE
COMMON COUNCIL.

Think the City now has Enough Drinking Places.—Matter of Granting the School Board the Fair Grounds Referred to a Committee without any discussion on the matter.

The common council met in regular session at the city hall on Tuesday evening, Mayor Wheelan presiding and a quorum of aldermen present.
A committee that had been appointed to investigate saloon matters in the city made a report recommending that no more saloon licenses be granted the present year, except in the case of a hotel wanting to put in a buffet
in connection with the house.

Alderman Bossert thought that it would not be the proper thing to prohibit others from going into the saloon business if they cared to do so, saying that the recommendation of committee gave those already in the business a monopoly.

Mayor Wheelan explained that it was his idea that if the drinking places became too plentiful in a town that it was possible that lawlessness might become prevalent in some of the places in order for them to make a living, which was not the case now.
Alderman Bossert made a motion that the recommendation of the committee be rejected, which was lost by a vote of 7 to 4. A motion was then made that the report be adopted which was carried by the same vote.

Five petitions were presented to the city council which set forth the advantages to be gained by deeding the fair ground to the school commissioners, and asking that the same be done.
These petitions were signed by some two hundred and fifty persons. The matter was referred to a committee without discussion.

A letter from the state board of control was read. It referred to the un-sanitary and other objectionable conditions of many of the city lockups thruout the state and recommending that our places of retention be looked to. The matter was referred to the chief of police.

B. W. Brown and Louis Schenock each had a bill against the city for damages to their property from the high water last spring. The trouble is caused from a ditch which leads across their land and which seems to be inadequate to handle the water that should flow thru it. The bill of Mr. Schenock was disallowed but no action was taken on the one of Mr.
Brown. Mr. Brown promised the city
the right of way thru his property provided the ditch is widened and deepened sufficiently to carry off the water that flows into it. A number of other bills were allowed after which the council adjourned.

Married at Merrill.

Richard Harvey of this city and Miss Delima Chauvin were married at Merrill on Monday morning at the Catholic church.

On Monday noon Mr. and Mrs.
Harvey passed thru this city on their bridal tour, and a number of Dick's friends assembled at the depot and gave him the benefit of a goodly shower of rice, old shoes and other missiles that are calculated to speed
a newly wedded pair toward the goal of happiness. Dick took it all in good part and seemed to enjoy the joshing as much as his tormentors.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey will visit Chicago, St. Louis and other points, expecting to return to this city on Sunday, and make their home here, having engaged board with Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Schlatter on the west side.

The following on the subject is taken from the Merrill Advocate:

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Francis Xavier church, at eight o'clock yesterday morning,
when Rev. Cassals united Miss Delima Chauvin and Mr. Richard Harvey in marriage. A reception was given after the ceremony. The bride is a charming young lady of many excellent qualities and the groom is a popular young man. The couple left on the morning train for a wedding tour to Chicago and other points. They will make Grand Rapids their home.

Married at Thorp.

On Tuesday, June 30th, Benjamin
W. Lemley of this city and Miss Zadie Colby of Thorp, were married at the latter place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Colby.

Mr. Lemley is well known in this city, having lived here all his life, and has many friends to wish him success in life. Mr. and Mrs. Lemley will be at home after August 1st, at 909 Washington Boulevard, Chicago.

WAS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Fred Roenius Received Enough of a Shock to be Rendered Unconscious.

Fred Roenius had an experience on Thursday afternoon, the memory of which will probably remain with him
the balance of his life, even though he lives to a good old age.

He had gone to the pasture after the cow soon after supper, when a bolt of lightning struck so near him that he was rendered unconscious, and laid out in the rain for some time before regaining his senses, when he crawled to the home of Jacob Winger, where medical assistance was called and measures taken to restore his circulation and bring him to life once more.

Fred's story of the affair is quite meagre. He remembers that he had caught the horse belonging to the family and was going to get the cow,
when things became a blank to him.

When he came to he was lying in the pasture, and was so badly paral-yzed from the shock that he was unable to walk. The rain was still falling, but he managed to crawl to Mr.
Winger's home where he was taken in, and his people apprized of his condition and medical assistance summoned.

When the medical man arrived he was found to be in a pretty bad shape, his muscles being tense and drawn so that he was partially paralyzed and hardly able to breathe. After working for a time he was somewhat relieved and later was taken to his home since which time he has been making fair progress toward recovery.

TWO GOOD GAMES.

Local Ball Team Defeats Marshfield Saturday and Sunday.

Marshfield met the Grand Rapids baseball team in two good games on Saturday and Sunday, and the result was a victory for the local team both days.

The boys played some good ball all the way thru, and tho there were some errors made on both sides, there was no time when they were not able to steady down to business again in short order.

Saturday's game stood 10 to 6 and the score on Sunday was 9 to 7. Brennan, McLaughlin and Smith did efficient work both with the stick and the field, while Petzold and Bandelin as battery contributed their share Bandelin making some fine plays that resulted disastrously for the visitors.

The home boys went to pieces a little in the 6th inning on Sunday and the spectators thought it was all day with them, as the score stood 7 to 5,
but the boys steadied down, and won in a canter, having the last half of the ninth to play when the game was over.

The one thing to regret is that the boys have no inclosed grounds to play in. Many who now fail to pay would then either have to put up their money or else stay away from the game.

Ice Cream Made Them Sick.

Several parties who ate ice cream
at one of the stands on the west side on the 4th of July were taken violently ill soon after, and in several cases the assistance of a physician had to be summoned.

It is not known just what caused the trouble, but it is supposed that there was something the matter with the ice cream, or the freezer in which it was made, as mostly the ones that ate the cream were affected. None of the cases resulted fatally, although some of the sick ones were ill for a time.

The doctors who attended the cases did not seem to blame the ice cream particularly, seeming to think that it was merely a case of eating more than they should, as is often the case on a holiday. It is certain that some who ate the cream were not affected by it, and that there were cases of sickness that day of persons who had not eaten any of the cream.

PAULINE SEWALL came into her chamber and sat down abstractedly before her dressing table. She had been married little more than a month, and her first quarrel with her husband had taken place not quite five minutes before. She had left the scene of the conflict with the proud air of a victorious general withdrawing his troops, but now, as she sat down to review the battle, her heart sank with the heavy consciousness that she had had decidedly the worst of it.

It was not that she had not a glorious cause, nor could she claim that she had been taken unawares. Pauline had long foreseen and been prepared for this struggle. Her array of arguments, firm and invulnerable, had been drawn up in line of battle and reviewed many times. Words were to be the only weapons. Tears, the exclusive and overwhelming allies of her sex, were to be scornfully rejected. There should be a fair contest, in which man, traditional oppressor, serene and invulnerable of defeat, should be overcome on his own field of action and with his own methods of warfare, but so cautiously and with so little blinding of arms and war of artillery that he might scarcely know himself beaten, and peace was to follow, immediate and lasting.

Few campaigns, however, follow the exact lines marked out for them. The attack had come so sudden. That glittering line of argument, so invincible when on parade, had fled before shelter. A horrid sense of confusion, the sharp sting of a wound, a blud skirmish with poisoned arrows—obsolete and unworthy weapon—and the sight of the enemy, man, in agony, and down goes woman once more, vanquished by herself.

Pauline drew a sharp breath and, turning quickly, took up her husband's photograph to study it intently and curiously, as if she had never seen it before. She herself was twenty-three. She had married a man of sixty. She had secretly feared and adored this man, her father's friend, all through her childhood, admiring him for the ability which had brought him, a typical "self made" man, from a grand boy to owner of one of the largest dry goods shops in New York; pitying him for his misfortunes, the hysterical, weak minded wife, who had died five years ago, and his two sons, both weak and bad, who had done their unwhimsical worst to ruin him and his fortunes.

The story was commonplace enough, but it had come very close to Pauline, who had watched the fortitude and strength of her hero from day to day for so many years.

There had been plenty of people, at the announcement of Mr. Sewall's second engagement, who had whispered of dotting old men and portionless girls who married for money, but Pauline had no illusions as to the position of things. She knew very well that he was marrying her for nothing more sentimental than that he wished a sensible and agreeable companion for his old age.

During the past month she had watched and studied him with an interest greater than she had ever felt before. She had been amused and touched by the evident relief he felt at the orderliness and regularity of his household arrangements. His surprise at the modesty of their first month's bills had been positively pathetic.

"Are these all?" he had said, tapping the pile she had presented with a peremptory forefinger and looking up from under his heavy brows in his searching way.

"Are you so anxious for more?" she had retorted, laughing, and he had commented shortly, "Yet we have lived very well."

Once or twice she had caught an appreciative twinkle in his eye when she had boldly and sanely stood out against his will in some small matter.

Mr. Sewall was in the habit of reading his morning paper at the breakfast table, a habit he resumed after the wedding journey. Pauline eyed him askance for several mornings, saying nothing. Then one night she brought a book to the dinner table and read demurely throughout the meal. It seemed ominous to her that her husband made no sign, but toward the end of dessert one of her uneasy, reconnoitering glances met a very quizzical one from him, and that conflict was won by a laugh and a blush.

There was, however, just one thing which Pauline had known from the first would cause trouble between her husband and herself. She had one brother, a weak and shambling apology of a man, resembling sufficiently Mr. Sewall's own two sons, but Pauline cherished for John Cowden a pitying and unshakable affection, such as his mother might have felt if she had lived. His frequent appeals for money to his father had long since been received with indifference, but Pauline was never weary with sympathy and excuse and stubbornly continued to divide with him whatever small store of spending money came to her purse, though much against the wishes of her family. Mr. Sewall had said to her shortly before their wedding, "I wish you to understand, Pauline, that, though I shall settle a certain amount on you every year for your own personal use, not one cent of my money is ever to be thrown away on John Cowden." The girl had stilled and pondered, opening her lips as if to speak and then sitting silent. She had her own ideas on this subject, assuring herself stoutly that a man and his wife should have equal rights to their united resources, and from her personal allowance she had long since decided that "helping John" should take whatever she could spare, even though in open rebellion against her husband's wishes. She should make no secret of it, nor yet would she seem either to her from him or defy him by mentioning it beforehand.

Nothing more had been said on the subject until this evening, when she had been summoned before her husband. He was sitting at his desk in the library, and his expression, stern and forbidding, had warned her that the expected was about to happen.

There was no preamble. "I have a letter from your father," he began abruptly, "in which he says your brother has been boasting that his sister, who has 'bagged a millionaire,' will 'keep him in tin' hereafter." Mr. Sewall's voice was very hard, and the words "bagged a millionaire" were said with a sneer which made Pauline wince.

"You admit it, then?" her husband broke in furiously. The loss of self control in this man seemed so impossible and so unexpected that his wife started back in alarm. His voice had in it all the despairing rage of a creature which feels again the familiar grip of the trap from which it had thought itself forever free. "Woman as you are, I wonder that you own so much. Before we were married I ordered you never to give one cent of my money to your worthless scoundrel of a brother. Have you forgotten it? Answer me!"

Pauline's twentieth century spirit rose. "It was my money, not yours," she said defiantly, "and why should you order me to do anything? I am not a child."

"You are my wife."

"I suppose you mean your slave."

"I married you, Pauline," said Mr. Sewall, with contemptuous bitterness, "because I thought you would make me an efficient and obedient housekeeper. I trusted that your father's daughter would have some good sense and discretion, but I see," he continued, "that you are like the rest—without reason or honor. It is not your fault, I suppose, since you are a woman."

Joshua Sewall's miserable experience had made it impossible for him to realize the effect of such words as these on a sensitive woman who loved him. Pauline lashed out wildly. "You married me, then, to be a servant without wages who cannot give up her place. Very well. I have my revenge, for I married you, an old man who might have been my father, stupidly and solely for your money!" Then she had turned and fled from the room without another glance at the frozen figure at the desk.

Pauline shut the eyes of her imagination when she thought of the future. Remorse, together with many extenuations of her husband's words, was already hard at work within her. She did not go downstairs again that night. In the morning when she went to breakfast her husband had already gone. All day long she wandered from one trifling employment to another, restless and disconsolate, feeling for the first time the disadvantage of being a rich woman with servants' hands to fulfill all the necessary duties of life.

Over and over again she reviewed despairingly the scene of the night before, wondering how she had ever come to fling that cruel, taunting lie, but her own calmer reflections had brought such quick forgiveness for her husband that she grew hopeful for herself, so that she was woefully disappointed when he did not appear at dinner time.

It was only at 9 o'clock that she heard him come in and go to the library. Presently he sent for her, and she went to him with a most contrite spirit, determined to do her utmost by apology and conciliation, no matter what he might do or say. But she was scarcely prepared for the ominous whiteness of his set face or the judicious sternness of his demeanor as he sat at his desk with a couple of official looking documents under his hand.

Pauline stood before him, hesitating appealingly. Her husband's eyes met hers without a change from their stony calm. All at once it came over the girl what a task she had undertaken—to make this hard old man of the world love and trust an undisciplined and inexperienced creature like herself—and how miserably and soon she had come to utter failure.

Joshua Sewall looked at his wife's face, paling and flushing, and at her quivering lips. He believed she had spoken the truth in her anger the night before. He saw nothing in her expression now but fear of the consequences. And Pauline, on her side, saw only the sneer in his searching eyes, and her own hardened, and she straightened and felt no more dread, but only a patient sense of inevitable misery.

Mr. Sewall spoke first. "You inform-me last night," he began coldly, "that your reason for leaving my wife was through neglect for myself, as you had pretended, but simply to keep the advantage of my money. Such a condition of affairs naturally excludes you from any claim hereafter to my regard. It does not constitute, I believe, a reason for divorcing a wife, but I can at least prevent you from realizing your expectations. Since money is your only object I shall make it my business to deprive you of that in the future as completely as lies in my power. I have today altered my will, leaving you at my death exactly what the law allows and not a penny more. I have also made out a list," Mr. Sewall raised a paper from the desk without moving his eyes from his wife's white face, "of certain shops at which you can order, I think, whatever you need for your clothing and other necessities. If there is anything I have omitted, I will add to the list when advisable. The bills will be sent to me every month. Your belongings will of course be ready at any time to take you wherever you may wish to go. But," added Mr. Sewall, raising his voice slightly, "you shall never again, if it is in my power, touch one cent of my money while I live."

He stepped and held out the list toward his wife. Whatever outburst of rage or hysteria his experience or the bitterness of his spirit may have led him to expect, nothing followed. Pauline took the paper mechanically from his hand and went quietly and without a word out of the room.

In the days that followed there came to her a curious sense of relief, almost of rest. Her doom had fallen, and there was a sort of poetic justice about this curious punishment—or revenge. But there came to her, oddly enough, a first faint feeling of hope from the fact that she had succeeded in moving the man so deeply. She regretted keenly what had happened, and though it had been put out of her power to confess her remorse, she had been shown a way to suffer for it.

The practical discomforts of the new order of things showed themselves promptly. She had emptied her purse of all the change which had happened to be in it, sending somewhat dramatically the few bills and coins in an envelope, and put it in a corner of the desk, wondering, half childishly, if her husband would ever realize she was too proud to take even this advantage of his forgetfulness or generosity.

"Excuse me, Mrs. Sewall, but the man has flushed mending the window and wants to know will you pay him the 50 cents now?"

"The postman is at the door, ma'am. He'll be wanting 10 cents extra on a letter, ma'am."

"It's my afternoon out, Mrs. Sewall, and could you advance me a dollar or two on my wages, please?"

Poor Mrs. Sewall had hard work at first to conceal her confusion on these embarrassing occasions, but her answer was invariably: "I am very busy, Maggie. You had better go to Mr. Sewall when he comes home." And at length the servants came to know it was no use to apply to her.

"This is a nice lady," they would whisper among themselves—"there ain't many nicer—but it's wicked the way she shoves everything on that poor man. It's easy to see, too, that he ain't any too fond of her."

Indeed, there was little communication during these days between husband and wife. Pauline took a piteous pleasure in making life as luxurious as possible for him.

Joshua Sewall was not a clubman. He came home regularly to his somewhat silent but invariably delicious dinners. He and Pauline had sometimes a little conversation about politics or purely impersonal matters of the day. He scarcely realized it until it had become quite usual. He had never before thought it worth while to talk to women about such things. Once or twice they spoke of books, but the conversation had lagged and he found himself saving his self respect with the excuse that men have nowadays less time for reading than women. Excepting for the thought of that one night, he would have been more at peace than ever before, but that ugly memory would not leave him.

"I married you simply and solely for your money!"

No Pity Shown.

"For years fate was after me continuously," writes E. A. Gailledge, Verbena, Ala. "I had a terrible case of piles causing 24 tumors. When all failed Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me." Equally good for Burns and all aches and pains. Only 25c at John E. Daly's Drug store.

ROMAN HOT BATHS.

They May Have Caused the Downfall of the Imperial City.

When Rome was in her glory and men were strong and women beautiful, they set first importance upon the bath. There were 800 public baths in Imperial Rome.

Before taking a bath the Romans took a little exercise. In the later history of Rome the room in which he undressed was heated, and after undressing he was anointed with oil. Then came the scratching and rubbing of the skin with the strigil. Following this perspiration was promoted by heated air or a hot bath. The bath was completed with a cold douche or cold plunge. Finally the body was anointed again.

It is believed by many writers that the introduction of the hot bath in the place of the cold bath among the Romans was the principal cause of their downfall. The luxury of the hot bath was weakening and destroyed that personal valor and hardihood for which the Romans were notorious in their earlier history.

Little by little the enervating influence of the hot bath gradually sapped away the vitality of the Roman soldier until the more hardy men of the north found them very easy foes to conquer.—Medical Talk.

Passing of the Aristocrats.

The Revolution, in giving us a separate nationality, had not destroyed time honored traditions. Our manners and customs were English, bred in the home; our point of view that of the mother country. Freedom and equality were political terms that no one dreamed of applying to social life. What gave position at that time was inherited distinction. Its possession was free from self consciousness—simply an advantage of birth, which that Providence who had always shown an affinity to hierarchies saw fit to bestow on a favored class. The community was divided by the grace of God into gentlemen—and others; perhaps it would be more exact to say gentlemen, their servants and others. The privacy of these gentlemen concerned themselves only. There were no "social happenings" heralded in their newspapers to force notoriety upon family life. How it would have astonished those early aristocrats if they could have anticipated the fictitious importance later days would attach to their privileges!—Elizabeth Dyer in Smart Set.

Oriental Jugglery.

An eyewitness of a celebrated feat of oriental jugglery tells the following story of what he thought he saw a band of Indian fakirs accomplish: "They produced a chain seventy-five feet in length and in my presence threw one end of it toward the sky, where it remained as if fastened to something in the air. A dog was then brought forward and, being placed at the lower end of the chain, immediately ran up and, reaching the other end, disappeared in the air. In the same manner a hog, a panther, a lion and a tiger were successively sent up the chain, and all disappeared at the upper end. At last they pulled down the chain and put it in a bag, no one ever discovering in what manner the different animals were made to vanish."

Spanish Brides.

There are no bridesmaids at a Spanish wedding, but instead a madrina (literally godmother) is present with the witnesses. There is no bride cake, but there is a reception and very often a feast after the ceremony. Before the wedding takes place the bride's new home is made ready for her reception, for the honeymooners do not start on their travels until the day after their marriage.

Before their departure they pay a polite visit to their respective parents. On their return dainty sweetmeats in pretty boxes are sent round to their friends. No visits are paid till little cards have been sent "offering their house."

A Lightning Change Artist.

The rapidly with which chameleons change their color is marvelous. You gather one from an outdoor shrub and it immediately becomes dark, almost black, hissing and with its mouth wide open, threatening to bite. Meanwhile it is never still, but continues to crawl upward whenever possible—up your sleeve, always upward. By degrees the angry black changes into whatever color is nearest. If one's dress is of a brownish color so is the chameleon's.

Greed.

"Don't you think that people pay too much attention to money nowadays?" "No, I don't," answered Senator Sorghum. "Time was when a five dollar bill looked as big as a farm to a member of the legislature. Now he won't pay any attention to it whatever."—Washington Star.

Expert at It.

Townley—This paper says that one of those idiotic colleges is going to make Senator Boodler a "doctor of laws."

Brownley—Well, that's appropriate enough. He doctors the laws every time he gets a chance.—Exchange.

A Money Saver.

City Guest—Why don't you have your windows washed, landlord? I can't see out.

Country Innkeeper—No, don't want 'em cleaned. If they were clean I'd have to get curtains to keep the sun out.

Men do not change much, after all. Three hundred years ago a wise man wrote this: "A man knows little who tells his wife all he knows."—Acheson Globe.

tracked the opium business in Philippines in order to get the ple to quit thinking about it, it oubtedly is the intention of the merican administration to establish opium monopoly in those islands.

The British have done a lucrative d flourishing business in opium er since they introduced it in China.
nsidering the splendid effects ich the dope has produced in the estial regions, Taft's Government is every reason to be exuberantly imistic about the consequences to flow the setting up of an opium onopoly in the Philippine Islands.
he dope should prove more effica-ous than Bibles and guns.

Wausau is having a time over the og question. Recently the common ouncil of that beautiful little city de-reed that the dogs should run at large o more, and the law is being enforced. W. H. Ellis, the publisher of the hilosopher, published an article in is little magazine, in which he roasts he mayor and common council on the og question, and then takes a whack
t them on several other subjects, in which he stated that the city government was extravagant, incompetent and a set of scallwags all around.
William H. don't want the dogs shut up and thinks that it is a shame that they should be, but from what the ocal press say up there he seems to stand all alone on the proposition.

Senator Hagemester is thinking of retiring from politics and jumping
his job as state senator, and the Green Bay Gazette says that "his retirement will be a misfortune which the state and district will have to bear." Yes, it will be an awful misfortune if the senator should retire, but so long as he continues to manufacture the same quality of beer as heretofore, we cannot see how his retirement will affect the people in this region to any great extent.

It is reported that Mark Hanna is considering the acceptance of the nomination for vice president. It must be that Mark is seeking for political oblivion. There was never but one man who survived the vice-presidency, and it was a case of luck with him.

A telegram from Butte, Montana,
on July 2d chronicled the fact that a snowstorm was in progress there and that the indications were that the fall would be a heavy one, and yet some people kick on the changeableness of Wisconsin weather.

A proper drink: At the Louisiana Purchase exposition a milk lunch will be maintained under the auspices of the Wisconsin fair commissioners. This is a concession to the cow that should prove gratifying to the dairy interests of the state and especially to John Coit Spooner, the distinguished "friend of the cow."

At the Wisconsin headquarters
these will be constantly on tap, day and night, fresh milk to cheer the weary and to quench the Badger thirst. It will be more sustaining than Waukesha water and less exhalarating than the fluid with which the Milwaukee fire boat was christened.
There is no better drink than a glass of cold milk, fresh from the refrigerator. No man ever went "broke" drinking milk. It is a strictly proper drink and the Wisconsin commissioners have shown excellent judgment in providing a place where it may be had without inviting suspicion or scandal.

Big Timber Deal.
One of the largest land and timber transfers that has been negotiated in northern Wisconsin for several years was consummated in Milwaukee on Monday, when the Wisconsin Central railway, through its land department, sold to the Roddis Veneer company of Marshfield, 35,000 acres of hardwood timber land in the vicinity of Park Falls. While the terms of sale could not be learned, it is said that over $150,000 was paid by the Marshfield company for the right to cut the timber from the lands leased from the road, and for the many thousands of acres which were purchased outright.
The Roddis Veneer company, whose main plant and mills are located at Marshfield, is said to be one of the largest, if not the largest, industries of its kind in America. The company manufactures all kinds of hardwood veneers, but the main part of its business is given over to what is now known as built up panel work.

Worth 75 Cents Now.

The attention of the residents of Wood county outside of the city is called to the fact that the recent legislature passed a law changing the old way of registering births in towns and villages. The report hereafter will have to be made to the town clerk instead of the health officer as heretofore and for each report made the person reporting receives a fee of fifty cents for complying with the law and twenty-five cents for the report, making a total of seventy-five cents for each birth reported. When there is no doctor in attendance the householder or parents can make report.
The law for the registering of the births in cities has not been changed.

Annual Horse Show.

Milwaukee will have its first annual horse show in the Exposition building
the week of July 20, and judging from the amount of interest reflected by the press of that city it is to be a great success. High bred horses from Wisconsin and adjoining states, and even from far away Virginia, have been entered in the various classes. Society people from all the important cities of the west have already bought boxes, about 100 of them selling at $100 apiece
while others have brought $75 and $50 each. The Exposition building is being rearranged for the express purpose of accommodating the immense attendance that is anticipated.

Man Had Disappeared.

A woman was in the city on Tuesday looking for a party named Charles Burchhardt. She came from Kendall, Wis., and stated that Burchhardt had left Kendall some six weeks before to look up a location to go into business, having in his possession a sum of money that he had obtained by selling his business at Kendall. When last heard from the woman had got no information concerning the missing man.

Some one in your town this season is going to do a better business than last year. The question to be decided is—who is going to be the one? Every merchant wants to do more business than last year and believes he has the right lines laid down for the accomplishment of what he proposes. If he does not run up against a proposition which spoils his plans he should succeed, if the plan has been well considered at the outset. If there has been an opening for any one class of work and that class has been considered, and the plans perfected which would bring about the desired end, there will be a great deal of good for the merchant and much satisfaction for customers at the same time. Think out the plan and push the thing thru a hard campaign until the test has proven the wisdom of the work.

—Indigestion arises from a weakened condition of the stomach, caused by over eating, or eating indigestible or improperly cooked food, alcoholic drinks, etc., thus exhausting nerve force and the stomach resulting in indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness and constipation. A cure of these complaints can be effected in a short time by the regular use of Re-Go, the famous Tonic Laxative Syrup. The expense is only 25 or 30 cents and is only 26 or 30 cents and is certainly a modest doctor bill. Re-Go is sold by Sam Church.

Fruit Food and Medicine.
Fruit food has many uses besides pleasing the taste, it is well known, but the exact properties of each kind are not so well understood by the commoners, and a few suggestions on the subject may not be amiss, says the Christian Work.
Fruit alone will not sustain life for any great length of time, but helps to furnish a variety in the diet.
It stimulates and improves appetite and digestion, relieves thirst, and introduces water into the system, acts as a laxative or astringent, stimulates the kidneys, and supplies the organic salts necessary to proper nutriment.
If the medical uses of fruit were understood and care taken to used the appropriate kinds much less medical treatment would be needed.
Among the laxatives are figs, prunes,
dates, nectarines, oranges, and mulberries.
The astringents are blackberries, dewberries, raspberries, pomegranates,
quinces, pears, wild cherries, cranberries, and medlars.
The kinds used for diuretic are grapes, black currants, peaches, whortle-berries, and prickly pears.
The refrigerants are red and white currants, gooseberries, lemons, limes and apples.
Apples are useful as a stomach sedative and will relieve nausea and even seasickness.
Grapes and raisins are nutritive and demulcent, making them excellent for the sickroom.
It is sometimes difficult to keep raisins, figs, and dates away from the inquisitive little ants and roaches, but this is easily accomplished by putting in paper bags that have been well brushed over with strong borax water and dried before the fruit is put in.
The little pests do not like the borax and will not gnaw through the sack
when thus prepared.
A fig split open makes a good poultice for a boil. It is especially useful for gunbolls. A split raisin is also good.
Lemons are useful in health and sickness. Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies for an incipient cold. It is also excellent in case of biliousness.
For malaria the "Roman cure" is prepared by cutting the rind and pulp of a lemon into a pint of water, then boiling until there is only a half pint.
One teaspoonful is taken before each meal. This has cured obstinate cases when quinine failed.
Lemon sirup made by baking a lemon twenty minutes and then squeezing the juice upon half a cup of sugar is excellent for hoarseness and to break up a cold.

—A. R. Bass of Morgantown, Ind., had to get up ten or twelve times in the night, and had a severe backache and pains in the kidneys. Was cured by Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by Johnson & Hill Co.

Best of John J. Vesper was in the city on Thursday last by taking a train from Vesper, Wis., and before the wheels could be stopped the wheels had passed over a rail.

The federal coroner on Saturday from the University of Wisconsin near Vesper, Wis., leaving for his duties.

John J. Vesper was in the city on Thursday last by taking a train from Vesper, Wis., and before the wheels could be stopped the wheels had passed over a rail.

Professors Whitson and Sanden from the state University were in the city on Thursday evening and met with representatives of the Wisconsin State Cranberry Growers association and a transfer was made of the experimental station to the state. The officers of the association wish it stated, however, that the turning over of these grounds to the state does not mean that they will discontinue their work. In fact, they expect that the work of the experts will assist them to give the growers more statistics and information than they were able to do before. Messrs. Ramsey and Haskins have been stationed at the experimental station and expect to spend all their time there. Both are from the university.

The Journal Band Concert.—The program to be given by the Journal Newsboys' Band in this city on July 15 will follow closely the program given at the famous Happy Hours meetings of The Journal Newsboys' Association. It is claimed for some of the soloists that they are the finest for their age in the world. Henry Winsauer the violinist is only 16 years old, yet he will graduate next year from the Conservatory of Music and may be sent to complete his education to Boston or perhaps to Germany. It is doubtful if young Winsauer has an equal in America, age considered.

To Arrange Program.—There will be a meeting at the office of Judge Gaynor next Sunday afternoon of all of the committees of the Wisconsin State Cranberry Growers Association for the purpose of arranging the program for the August meeting of that Association. The meeting this year will be an unusually interesting one, as many have signified their intention of being present who will add greatly to the occasion. The meeting will be held at the Gaynor-Blackstone Marsh, and a feature of the occasion will be the picnic dinner.

Have Surrendered Charter.—The Knights of Pythias of this city have surrendered their charter and gone out of business, owing to the lack of interest of the members. The financial end of the organization was in a healthy enough condition, but nobody cared to assume enough responsibility to attend meetings regularly. One would think from this that there were enough lodges in town, but still the work of organizing new ones goes merrily on.

Chance to Make Money.—Those having in charge the concert to be given by the Journal Newsboy band, offer the young people twenty-five cents for every six tickets they sell to the entertainment. Anybody can sell tickets that wants to, and as the entertainment is for the benefit of the high school athletic team they should go like hot cakes. Tickets will be 25 and 35 cents.

Died at the Asylum.—County Judge Conway received word last week that Christ Boeschstein had died at the Waupaca county insane asylum. Boeschstein was a county charge and was brought here from Milwaukee last winter and committed to the asylum. He was at one time fairly well to do, as mechanics go, having worked at his trade of tinsmith here for a number of years.

A Fierce Storm.—One of the fiercest electric storms that has visited this section in many a day was on Thursday evening, when the rain fell in torrents and the continuous flash of lightning and roar of thunder made it anything but pleasant. Two and three-tenths inches of water fell in a very short time, and the streets were a raging torrent for about an hour.

Decision Reversed.—The case of Wells against the town of Remington which was argued before the supreme court last month, was decided in favor of the plaintiff on Friday, reversing the decision of the circuit court, which means that the case will be given a new trial. B. R. Goggins was attorney for the plaintiff.

Has Installed Power.—George F. Krieger has had an electric motor placed in his shop on the west side and is now able to turn out work much more expeditiously than heretofore. The electric motor is becoming quite a factor in furnishing power in this city.

Working on Bridge.—The bridge builders arrived in the city again last week and since then have been carrying forward the work of rebuilding on that structure. The work seems to move very slowly, but possibly this may be a mistake.

Glee Club Coming.—The Lawrence University glee club will give a concert in this city at the M. E. church on the evening of July 11th. Among the members of the club this year is Edgar Kellogg, who has considerable talent as a singer.

Hunt Case Opened Again.—The famous Hunt case was opened again at the court house on Monday before Judge Webb. The interested parties expect that it will consume about two weeks more before the case is completed.

No False Claims.—The proprietors of Foley's Honey and Tar do not advertise this as a "sure cure for consumption." They do not claim it will cure this dread complaint in advanced cases, but do positively assert that it will cure in the earlier stages and never fails to give comfort and relief in the worst cases. Foley's Honey and Tar is without doubt the greatest throat and lung remedy. Refuse substitutes. For sale by Johnson & Hill Co.

Ellis-Tucker.—Dan Ellis of this city and Miss Kate Tucker of Nekoosa were married on Sunday at Nekoosa at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sarah Tucker, Rev. Mr. Pickney officiating.

The young people left the next day for Kaukauna on a short wedding trip after which they will make their home in this city. The Tribune extends congratulations.

In speaking of how he cured it he says, "I had been suffering from the effects of La Grippe for several weeks last winter, and had tried nearly every remedy known to myself or friends, but found no relief up to the time I began using Harts' Honey and Horehound. Special Correspondence.
Attorney General Knox looks forward to the time when he will live in California, the pretty land of rest and retirement, where thousands of workers and outcasts mix up and far off, as in a dream. He has invested in land at Santa Barbara, within sound of the old mission bells, and in due time, when the trusts are "busted" and the wicked are laid low, he will build him a castle of indolence and lay down his troubled ear.

Mr. Knox has spent several winters in southern California and has returned each time with reluctance to the strife of modern times. It is not generally known that the attorney general of the United States is a poet of exquisite though modest taste and that in a strictly quiet way he presented "sugared sonnets to his private friends" rivaling those of the poets of more romantic days. Some experts have gone so far as to assert that the laurel and the bay belong to Attorney General Knox rather than to the poet who pre sides over the department of state.

National Museum's New Home.
The first step has been taken toward erecting a suitable home for the National museum. This important and popular institution has been greatly cramped for years for a suitable building in which to exhibit the wonders and curiosities that have been gathered under the direction of the government. Congress was made to realize the necessity for a new building and made adequate appropriations. A contract has been made with a firm of architects for the plans and specifications of the new structure, which is to cost $3,500,000. Only general plans of the new home of the museum have been decided upon, and before the actual construction begins some of the most noted museums of the world will be visited and studied. In the meantime tests will be made of the ground on which the building is to be erected, its location having been fixed between Ninth and Twelfth streets, or just about where the present one story structure now stands, adjoining the Smithsonian Institution. It will take three years to erect the building.

Discriminating Gratitude.
The pension bureau has discovered a Brooklyn woman with more real, if unconscious, humor to the square inch than many a professional after dinner talker. She is the widow of a New Yorker who fought and bled for his country, and she had waited long for the stipend Uncle Sam passes out as a small token of the republic's gratitude. At last the government has granted her a pension, and the patient applicant has acknowledged the tardy action in the following note:

Brooklyn, May 17th, 1903.
Commissioner of Pensions:
I wish to express my Gratitude and thanks to you and all concerned for my Pension and to God who has given me Patience and Courage to wait. Respectfully,
Mrs. _____

Coal Dealers Must Reimburse.
Uncle Sam is not to suffer any loss through the coal famine of last winter. If a decision rendered by the comptroller of the treasury is sustained and enforced, it is the practice for the government to make contracts for its coal supply everywhere. Few of these contracts were filled while the dealers were receiving fancy prices for the precious fuel last winter. In many instances the government had to enter the market as a competitor with the citizens and buy its coal where it could be had at any price demanded. The comptroller in his decision holds that the government can compel the coal dealers who contracted to furnish it coal to reimburse it and pay into the treasury the difference between the contract price of coal and the price the government was forced to pay.

Working Overtime Printing Money.
The presses at the bureau of engraving and printing are running twenty-four hours a day printing money. The run is on new national bank notes. It takes about twenty-five days to prepare new money for the banks so that it will be properly "seasoned" to go into the hands of the public. The banks have orders ahead for many millions, and the circulation is being delivered to the comptroller by wagon loads each day. From the comptroller's office it is shipped to the banks upon the deposit of bonds covering the amount to be shipped. The circulation of national banks of the United States has passed the $400,000,000 mark, the largest amount in their history.

Must Remove Evil Influences.
Acting Secretary of the Navy Darling has directed that the Pacific squadron, which was ordered to the Bremerton (Wash.) yards for docking, remain in San Francisco until the department is assured that the Bremerton town council has wiped out the notorious resorts just outside the gates. In addition, the department will discontinue all work at Bremerton until the place has been cleared of evil characters. It is the determination that American sailors shall not be subjected to evil influences such as are said to flourish at the Bremerton yards. Such vessels as cannot be docked at the Mare Island navy yard will be sent to Atlantic stations.

Has Closed Her House.
Mrs. Shaw, wife of the Secretary of the treasury, has closed her Washington house for the summer, although she and her daughters will return here from Iowa for a few days before sailing for Europe July 2. Mrs. Shaw is now at Mount Vernon, Va.

The Pacific Cable.
The Pacific cable will be completed to Manila July 4. That is the information conveyed to the government by the Commercial Pacific Cable company, and the probability of the company is the first step toward the completion of the cable.

HYGIENE

So much is heard of the different treatments and cures for nearly all the ills to which man is heir, or thinks he is, that possibly interest will be shown in the machine recently designed by a southerner, seemingly to produce an effect exactly the reverse from the rest cure which has been preached in recent years. This new apparatus will give the movement cure, actually pummeling the different parts of the body until the disease is supposed to be hammered out and the healthy tissue renewed.

The patient to be treated reclines on a special couch, fitted with very flexible springs. Mounted on a vertical standard beside the couch is an electric motor, to which is attached a flexible shaft, through the medium of which movement is imparted to an eccentric. As the eccentric revolves it oscillates a vertical shaft with short, sharp strokes, and on the lower end of this shaft is the pummeling device, which is preferably of pneumatic construction, with means for varying the degree of hardness to suit the condition of the flesh to be treated.

Says Cornets Cause Appendicitis.
The death in Paris of the Comtesse Louise de Talleyrand-Perigord, following a very serious operation, calls attention to the great number of society women who have been serious ill, including Princesses de Wagram, Vi-comtesse Antoine de Coudades, Mme. Alfred de la Ville le Roux, Mlle. de France and Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau. Several have had operations for appendicitis. Recently a professor of the faculty of medicine was asked how he accounted for this, and he said:

"It is all due to the present fashionable corset, the pressure of which displaces the abdomen, impeding digestion."

Typhoid Antitoxin.
Dr. Allan Macfadyen of the Jenner Institute in London has succeeded, by first freezing typhoid bacilli to a hard and brittle state with liquid air, in so pulverizing them that an extract of the toxin contained in the cell substance can be obtained. Experiments have already been made with this extract which indicate that a valuable remedy for the treatment of typhoid fever can be prepared by its use.

Epilepsy Goes With Hydrophobia.
It is related in Vienna that a high Serbian official, afflicted with epilepsy, recently went to the Pasteur Institute at Budapest for treatment for hydrophobia. Under the Pasteur treatment the wound caused by the bite of the dog soon healed, and with this cure his epilepsy also disappeared. The case is attracting much interest in medical circles.

The proposed demonstration at Lansing, Mich., of Blou J. Arnold's new system of electric railway construction is only another one of several demonstrations and tests which are slowly and apparently surely paving the way toward the future abandonment of steam as the motive power in land passenger transportation. The system is known as "electro pneumatic" and it is promised for it that it will reduce the cost of equipment from 20 to 40 per cent. Substations are to be done away with, thus effecting a large saving in labor.

In brief, the system "eliminates the present rotary converter substation system" and operates "by means of a high tension working conductor, carrying the current to a single phase alternating current motor by means of which the car is driven directly by the motor without the use of the direct current."

Much of the energy which is now dissipated through the stopping and starting of cars will be conserved under the new system. It is said, because the speed is to be controlled by compressed air, and the energy otherwise lost is stored and may be used later as if the car were equipped with a storage battery.

This storage of energy makes it possible to detach the cars from the main line, disconnect the conductor and with the stored power do necessary switching without the use of energy from the power house.

Consumption of Railroad Ties.
The annual demand for railway ties is 400 for each mile of track, and the average life of a tie is seven years. It is an unusual acre of forest that has 400 trees that will make three ties each, and it takes fifty years to grow a tree that will make three ties. Therefore, the consumption of ties is a serious problem.

Burning the Dead.

Cremation has been practiced by most of the nations of the earth from the earliest ages, and although in pagan countries it may have taken the form of fire worshiping there can be no doubt that its adoption by the ancients was for the most part prompted by other than religious reason. Greeks ascribe its introduction to Hercules, who, having sworn to transmit the body of Argus to his father, thought this the most convenient way of fulfilling his promise. According to Homer, the burning of the dead was a common practice among the Greeks long before the Trojan war, but the earliest record of it is among the Scythians, who inhabited the vast region known under the name of Tartary. Strabo accounts banded down concerning the manners of some of the ancient natives of Hindustan also allude to the custom. The idea of purification by fire was in all ages universal, and with good reason. Some believed that the body was unclean after the departure of the soul, and it was therefore deemed necessary that it should be purified by fire. Ovid expressed the general opinion of his time when he said that the soul was not completely separated from the body until the latter was consumed on the pyre. The Athenians invariably after a battle burned the slain.

An Economical Man.

A commercial traveler tells of a man who was riding on a train and pretended to become ill after eating a sandwich. The man opened his grip and took out a hot water bag. "He got a sympathetic porter," the commercial man continues, "to fill the water bag with boiling water and then he opened up his lunch basket, took out a piece of fried steak and warmed it up on the water bag. You talk about your light housekeeping! Then, after he had warmed the steak, he cut it all up with a pair of scissors and fed it to himself with a pair of sugar tongs, because he would not take a chance with a fork going around a curve. But his finish was a limit. After he had eaten the steak he unscrewed the stopper of the water bag and poured himself out a cup of hot coffee. He had the grounds in the bag all the time."

An Early Day Railroad Wreck.

In the early days of the road there was a smash up, and all were badly shaken up. The next morning a burly farmer hopped into the superintendent's office and said, "Mr. Superintendent, I came in to see what you were going to give me for shaking me up so yesterday." The superintendent asked how much he thought he ought to have for his injuries. "Well, I think it worth 50 cents, and I will settle for that." The superintendent replied that it was quite a sum, but as the man seemed honest he would pay him, and he did so, taking his receipt in full. The superintendent said, "I will be liberal with you and give you a pass to take you home." "No, you won't. As long as these pins—slapping his legs—"last I won't go on your darn railroad any more."—National Magazine.

Prevention of Corns.

There are suggestions without number for the cure of corns. Any reputable chiropodist and some who are not reputable can furnish an unfailing remedy. But there is one sure way to prevent them. Don't wear the same pair of shoes two days in succession. Corns are caused by friction on the toes, and the most expert bootmaker cannot make two pairs of shoes which will rub the feet in the same place. The change of shoes gives the feet a chance to rest. It is also good for the shoes, and footwear which is treated in this fashion will last much longer than if put to daily use.

The Crocodile.

Pliny said the crocodile's skin "will abide any injury and not be pierced." That may have been true in his day, but it is not true now. The bullet of a heavy modern rifle will pierce the skin anywhere unless it strikes in a slanting direction. The crocodile is not as a rule hard to kill, provided one can get a good shot at it, but that is just the trouble. It has not the marvelous vitality of the shark, which will sometimes struggle furiously for an hour, although covered with apparently mortal wounds.—Chicago News.

KITCHEN SUPERSTITIONS.

Why Most Cooks Always Stir Their Batter One Way Only.

"Take a good lump of fresh butter and melt it in a bowl, place it in a lined saucepan with a half pint of good rich cream, stir it gently over a low fire, always the same way, till it begins to simmer."

This recipe for the making of melted butter is quoted from an old fashioned cookery book of a century ago, but the direction to stir "always the same way" is observed as religiously today as it was then, and probably will be for a thousand years to come.

All cooks of all nations stir not only the same way, but also from east to west, a sure indication that the practice originated with sun worshippers.

Speaking of stirring brings to mind that in most English households—country ones at least—the practice of the whole family joining to stir the Christmas plum pudding is still in vogue.

There are many peculiar, old fashioned superstitions connected with cooking.

For instance, in Scotland, when oat-cakes are being baked, it is still customary to break off a little piece and throw it into the fire.

At one time, whenever a baking was made—which was perhaps once a month only—a cake was made with nine knobs on it. Each of the company broke one off, and, throwing it behind him, said, "This I give to thee; preserve thou my sheep," mentioning the name of a noxious animal—fox, wolf or eagle.

A roast pheasant is usually sent up with the tail feathers. This practice is a memorial of the days when a peacock was skinned before roasting and when cooked was sewed into its plumage again, its beak gilded and so served.

Tossing the pancake is another interesting food superstition. Formerly the master of the house was always called upon to toss the Shrove Tuesday pancake. Usually he did it so clumsily that the contents of the pan found their way to the floor, when a fine was demanded by the cook. The custom is still kept up at Westminster school, where a pancake is tossed over the bar and scrambled for. The one who secures it is rewarded with a guinea.

The origin of the cross on hot cross buns is a matter of dispute. There is little doubt that cakes partly divided into four quarters were made long before the Christian era. At one time it was believed that bread baked on Good Friday would never grow moldy, and a piece of it grated was kept in every house, being supposed to be a sovereign remedy for almost any kind of ailment to which man is subject.

In many parts of England it is considered unlucky to offer a mince pie to a guest. It must be asked for.—Boston Journal.

Ancient Beds.

In ancient times the beds we read about were simply rugs, skins or thin mattresses which could be rolled up and carried away in the morning. At night they were spread on the floor, which in the better class of houses was of tile or plaster, and as the shoes were not worn in the house and the feet were washed before entering a room the floors were cleaner than ours. After a time a sort of bench, three feet wide, was built around two or three sides of the room about a foot above the floor and, covered with a soft cushion, was used during the day to sit or lounge on and as a sleeping place at night. The bench was sometimes made like a settee, movable and of carved wood or ivory.—London Standard.

No Sense of Proportion.

The young man who had spent his efforts for several years without result in studying art was talking with his practical uncle, who had patiently paid the bills.

"Of course," said the young artist. "I know I haven't made much of a go of it, but I don't think you ought to advise me to try something else. You know it's best to put all your eggs in one basket and watch that basket."

"Um! That may be, Charlie; but did you ever think how foolish it is to put so many baskets around one bantam egg?"—Youth's Companion.

The Great Porcelain Tower.

In 1430 A. D., after nineteen years of ceaseless labor and an expenditure of about $800,000, the Chinese government finished the wonderful porcelain tower at Nankin, which stood for nearly four and a quarter centuries, until 1856, the most marvelous building ever erected by human hands. It was of octagonal form, 260 feet in height, with nine stories, each having a cornice and a gallery without.

Cholly's Repartee.

"Cholly is so clever at repartee!" exclaimed Clarence.

"Isn't he?" said Reginald. "What's his latest?"

"A gwent, howwid bwute said to him, 'You are the biggest fool in this state.' And Cholly answered wight off, 'I don't agree with you!'"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Two Effects.

"I never send out a story for publication," said Dullpath, the realist, "without first having slept over it." "I don't believe I've ever read one of them either without doing the same thing," returned Hawley.

Unlucky Wolves.

An incident just reported from Sivas, Turkey, seems to prove that the feeling which made wolves in wolves is right. Two musicians—a drummer and a piper—returning to their village from a wedding party were overtaken by a snowstorm and sought refuge in a deserted mill. They lit a fire with some wood they found in the place and were warming themselves when they saw a wolf emerge from a dark corner of the building. They jumped up on a shelf and, to their dismay, saw several more wolves join the first. The animals rushed in their direction and the drummer, at a loss for a mode of defense, set to beating his drum, whereupon his companion instinctively played his pipe. The effect was marvellous. The music so terrified the wolves that they attempted to run away, and as the door was closed, they began fighting, and several of them were torn to pieces, the survivors eventually escaping through a hole in the wall. This incident is vouched for by the Government Gazette of Sivas.

A Pickled Traveler.

A traveler in Tartary tells the following story of a corpulent Greek servant who accompanied him: "At the end of the third day the well seasoned kavaiss in attendance, whose whole life had been passed in the saddle, came, with a smile, to report that Gurgis was unable to proceed from station, as the doctors called it, of the colicoids. 'He can't be left behind, sir, in the desert,' added the old bektrakar, 'so, with your leave, we will give him the Tartar bath.' A tub of the strongest brine was accordingly prepared, in which the unfortunate Gurgis was forthwith immersed, after the most appalling howls at the first plunge, but subsiding shortly afterward and eventually after half an hour's tanning coming out so effectively case hardened that he rode a farther thousand miles to the Black sea in the course of the next week without showing a symptom of distress."

The Latin Quarter of Today.

The Latin quarter of today is as full of individual character as the same ground in the middle ages. One writer says Paris only possesses two really marked individualities, the student and the grisette. Not but that student life is always changing its outward semblance, just as the university structures themselves are changing theirs.

Since the days of Abelard Paris has grown from a town of 40,000 inhabitants clustering around a little island to one of 3,000,000, covering almost a whole province, but the students are still the soul of the city. When Paris makes merry or mourns, the students lead the way. It is the Latin quarter which sets the fashion in ideas, as the Champs Elysees in dress.—Scatterer's Magazine.

Political Burglaries.

It was through a stolen document, openly seized by the British ambassador in Berlin, that the British government first learned of the recognition of the independence of America by France. The British minister was Hugh Elliot, and he had the desk of the French minister forced open to obtain the copy of the treaty he wanted. In 1855 a sensation was created by the discovery of a plan by which secret documents were systematically abstracted from the Russian embassy in Berlin, being copied at night in the interests of another nation and replaced in the drawer at the embassy in the morning. The burglaries had been taking place for two years before they were discovered.

CELEBRATION WAS A SUCCESS.

NOT A MISHAP TO MAR THE FUN
AND FROLIC OF THE DAY.

Program and Everybody Goes Home Feeling that he has been Royally Entertained.—Perfect Weather all Day.—Everybody in Gala Costume.

The celebration in this city on the Fourth engineered by the Eagles was a success from every point of view. The city was crowded with visitors the entire day, starting in at early morning and lasting until late at night, and the weather was exceptionally fine all day. The city was gaily dressed in bunting and flags and everybody seemed to be determined to have a good time, and so far as can be learned, they all succeeded.

The program started in the morning with the floral and industrial parade. It was thought that merchants and others might not take enough interest in this feature to make it a success, but it was found that this was not the case for there was a good turnout, both of rigs decorated with flowers and those with industrial exhibits. Some of the rigs were very pretty and others unique in their get up, and with the band, military company and fire companies in their neat uniforms, it was indeed a brave showing. Both sides of the streets were lined with people to see this feature of the day, and all united in pronouncing it many times better than they had expected to see.

The reproduction of the bombardment of Santiago was mostly noise, but as the gloriousness of the Fourth depends largely on this for its completeness, this feature filled the bill to perfection.

The drill by Company A of Marshfield was witnessed by a large number of people, and as the boys gave a first class exhibition in every respect, it was appreciated by all.

At precisely twelve o'clock the whistle of the electric light plant blew several short blasts and everybody who was not out to the game thought that a fire had broken out. It proved to be only the signal for the fire run, however, and the west side fire department came down Cranberry street at a gait that was rapid enough to suit the most exacting. The time of making the run from where the alarm sounded to throwing a stream was one minute and forty-five seconds.

This ended the morning's entertainment and an intermission was taken until 1:45 in the afternoon, when Messrs. Davis and Arpin raced at the fair grounds with their automobiles. This was won by Mr. Davis, he making the two miles in six minutes and seven seconds. This part of the program was liked very much by those interested in automobiles.

The track events at the fair grounds were as follows:
120 yard low hurdles—Crawford, first; Fosgate, second; LaSarge, third. Time 15 seconds.

Running high jump—Crawford, first; LaSarge, second; Fosgate, third. Distance, 5 feet.

100 yard dash—Crawford, first; LaSarge, second; Fosgate, third. Time, 10.45 seconds.

Throwing the 12 pound hammer—Crawford, first; Fosgate, second; Jenkins, third. Distance, 120 ft. 1 in.

Throwing the discus—Crawford, first; Fosgate, second; Jenkins, third. Distance, 107 ft. 3 in.

From the above it will be seen that Earl Crawford took first in all the events. The totals are as follows: Crawford, 25; Fosgate, 11; LaSarge, 7; Jenkins, 2.

Following the athletic sports there was a ball game between Marshfield and Grand Rapids, which resulted in a victory for the home boys by a score of 10 to 6.

During this time there was a vaudeville entertainment at the opera house which was also well attended. The Gun club was also holding its tournament during the day, at which there were some twenty shooters in attendance, the details of which are given elsewhere.

The east side fire company made their run at six o'clock, and altho no track was kept of the time they made, it was done in short order, the new team recently purchased being a fast one.

The event that was waited for with the most anxiety was the balloon ascension, and as the balloonist had failed to make good last year, it was thought by some that this year's performance would be a repetition of what had gone before. This was not the case, however, and when the crowd assembled near the opera house they found the balloonist busily engaged in getting the huge bag filled with hot air. This was accomplished about half past six and a very pretty ascension was made, altho quite a heavy breeze was blowing.

Prof. Starloe, who was to ride the high ladder with his bicycle, lost his nerve for some reason or other, either thru having imbibed too much river water, or else from being out in the hot sun too long, and was unable to do his act. This was remedied, however, by securing a young fellow from Hall's circus, who did the turn to perfection.

In the evening there was a band concert, a dance at the opera house and a performance in the tent show on the west side, all of which were well attended, which ended the day's entertainment.

There was probably one of the largest crowds ever seen in the city, between four and five hundred coming from Marshfield alone, and something like a hundred from Stevens Point. Those who were here united in pronouncing the day and celebration perfect in all respects, the entire program being carried out to the letter, and as there were no accidents to mar the pleasure of the day, everybody went home well pleased with the Eagles and the people in general.

Gun Club Tournament.

The Grand Rapids gun club held its annual tournament on the Fourth of July. There were some noted shooters in attendance, there being two ex-state champions and the present state champion. The ex-champions were Marsh of Marshfield and Shultz of Tomah, and the present state champion is Johnson of Tomah.

A heavy wind blew all day and made some very hard targets to hit, but in spite of this some fair good scores were made. Ten events were shot according to the program, and following are the scores:

Work is Delayed.

The river came up to the seven foot mark again last week and the consequence was that the cofferdams of the Consolidated people were overflowed and work had to be stopped on a part of the dam. As the cofferdams were all strong enough to hold the weight of water on them a great deal of damage was averted.

The cofferdam across the Grand Chute throws nearly all the water thru the channel on the east side and the consequence is that rocks that stuck several feet out of water have since been covered with a raging torrent. While it has made a very pretty sight to look at for the uninterested observer, it probably has not proved so entertaining for those in-

DONT WANT ANY MORE SALOONS.

THAT WAS THE WILL OF THE
COMMON COUNCIL.

Think the City now has Enough Drinking Places.—Matter of Granting the School Board the Fair Grounds Referred to a Committee without any discussion on the matter.

The common council met in regular session at the city hall on Tuesday evening, Mayor Wheelan presiding and a quorum of aldermen present. A committee that had been appointed to investigate saloon matters in the city made a report recommending that no more saloon licenses be granted the present year, except in the case of a hotel wanting to put in a buffet in connection with the house.

Alderman Bossert thought that it would not be the proper thing to prohibit others from going into the saloon business if they cared to do so, saying that the recommendation of the committee gave those already in the business a monopoly.

Mayor Wheelan explained that it was his idea that if the drinking places became too plentiful in a town that it was possible that lawlessness might become prevalent in some of the places in order for them to make a living, which was not the case now. Alderman Bossert made a motion that the recommendation of the committee be rejected, which was lost by a vote of 7 to 4. A motion was then made that the report be adopted which was carried by the same vote.

Five petitions were presented to the city council which set forth the advantages to be gained by deeding the fair ground to the school commissioners, and asking that the same be done. These petitions were signed by some two hundred and fifty persons. The matter was referred to a committee without discussion.

A letter from the state board of control was read. It referred to the unsanitary and other objectionable conditions of many of the city lockups thruout the state and recommending that our places of retention be looked to. The matter was referred to the chief of police.

B. W. Brown and Louis Schenock each had a bill against the city for damages to their property from the high water last spring. The trouble is caused from a ditch which leads across their land and which seems to be inadequate to handle the water that should flow thru it. The bill of Mr. Schenock was disallowed but no action was taken on the one of Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown promised the city the right of way thru his property provided the ditch is widened and deepened sufficiently to carry off the water that flows into it. A number of other bills were allowed after which the council adjourned.

Married at Merrill.

Richard Harvey of this city and Miss Delima Chauvin were married at Merrill on Monday morning at the Catholic church.

On Monday noon Mr. and Mrs. Harvey passed thru this city on their bridal tour, and a number of Dick's friends assembled at the depot and gave him the benefit of a goodly shower of rice, old shoes and other missiles that are calculated to speed a newly wedded pair toward the goal of happiness. Dick took it all in good part and seemed to enjoy the joshing as much his tormentors.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey will visit Chicago, St. Louis and other points, expecting to return to this city on Sunday, and make their home here, having engaged board with Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Schlatter on the west side.

The following on the subject is taken from the Merrill Advocate: A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Francis Xavier church, at eight o'clock yesterday morning, when Rev. Cassals united Miss Delima Chauvin and Mr. Richard Harvey in marriage. A reception was given after the ceremony. The bride is a charming young lady of many excellent qualities and the groom is a popular young man. The couple left on the morning train for a wedding tour to Chicago and other points. They will make Grand Rapids their home.

Married at Thorp.

On Tuesday, June 30th, Benjamin W. Lemley of this city and Miss Zadie Colby of Thorp, were married at the latter place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Colby. Mr. Lemley is well known in this city, having lived here all his life, and has many friends to wish him success in life. Mr. and Mrs. Lemley will be at home after August 1st, at 909 Washington Boulevard, Chicago.

WAS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

Fred Roenius Received Enough of a Shock to be Rendered Unconscious.

Fred Roenius had an experience on Thursday afternoon, the memory of which will probably remain with him the balance of his life, even though he lives to a good old age.

He had gone to the pasture after the cow soon after supper, when a bolt of lightning struck so near him that he was rendered unconscious, and laid out in the rain for some time before regaining his senses, when he crawled to the house of Jacob Winger, where medical assistance was called and measures taken to restore his circulation and bring him to life once more.

Fred's story of the affair is quite meagre. He remembers that he had caught the horse belonging to the family and was going to get the cow, when things became a blank to him.

When he came to he was lying in the pasture, and was so badly paralyzed from the shock that he was unable to walk. The rain was still falling, but he managed to crawl to Mr. Winger's home where he was taken care of and his people apprized of his condition and medical assistance summoned.

When the medical man arrived he was found to be in a pretty bad shape, his muscles being tense and drawn so that he was partially paralyzed and hardly able to breathe. After working for a time he was somewhat relieved and later was taken to his home since which time he has been making fair progress toward recovery.

TWO GOOD GAMES.

Local Ball Team Defeats Marshfield Saturday and Sunday.

Marshfield met the Grand Rapids baseball team in two good games on Saturday and Sunday, and the result was a victory for the local team both days.

The boys played some good ball all the way thru, and tho there were some errors made on both sides, there was no time when they were not able to steady down to business again in short order.

Saturday's game stood 10 to 6 and the score on Sunday was 9 to 7. Brennan, McLaughlin and Smith did efficient work both with the stick and the field, while Petzold and Bandellina contributed their share. Bandellina making some fine plays that resulted disastrously for the visitors.

The home boys went to pieces a little in the 6th inning on Sunday and the spectators thought it was all day with them, as the score stood 7 to 5, but the boys steadied down, and won in a canter, having the last half of the ninth to play when the game was over.

The one thing to regret is that the boys have no inclosed grounds to play in. Many who now fail to pay would then either have to put up their money or else stay away from the game.

Ice Cream Made Them Sick.

Several parties who ate ice cream at one of the stands on the west side on the 4th of July were taken violently ill soon after, and in several cases the assistance of a physician had to be summoned.

It is not known just what caused the trouble, but it is supposed that there was something the matter with the ice cream, or the freezer in which it was made, as mostly the ones that ate the cream were affected. None of the cases resulted fatally, although some of the sick ones were ill for a time.

The doctors who attended the cases did not seem to blame the ice cream particularly, seeming to think that it was merely a case of eating more than they should, as is often the case on a holiday. It is certain that some who ate the cream were not affected by it, and that there were cases of sickness that day of persons who had not eaten any of the cream.

THE TOBACCO PLANT.

Its origin, according to a Quaint Legend of the East.

The prophet was taking a stroll in the country when he saw a serpent, stiff with cold, lying on the ground. He compassionately took it up and warmed it in his bosom. When the serpent had recovered it said:

"Divine prophet, listen. I am now going to bite thee."

"Why, pray?" inquired Mohammed.

"Because thy race makes perpetual war on mine," said the serpent.

"But thy race, too, makes perpetual war against mine," was the prophet's rejoinder. "How canst thou, besides, be so ungrateful and so soon forget that I saved thy life?"

"There is no such thing as gratitude upon this earth," replied the serpent, "and if I were now to spare thee either thou or another of thy race would kill me. By Allah, I shall bite thee!"

"If thou hast sworn by Allah I will not cause thee to break thy vow," said the prophet, holding his hand to the serpent's mouth. The serpent bit him, but he sucked the wound with his lips and spat the venom on the ground. And on that very spot there sprang up a plant which combines within itself the venom of the serpent and the compassion of the prophet. Men call this plant by the name of tobacco.—"Tobacco In Song and Story."

Wind and Temperature.

The wind does not affect the thermometer, as any one may find out for himself by a simple test. Take two dry bulb thermometers of exactly the same kind and hang one of them where it will be exposed to the wind and the other where it will be sheltered—say, on two sides of the corner of the house—and after allowing them to hang thus for a few minutes you will find that they register the same. And yet the person who stands near the thermometer that hangs in the wind will feel the cold more sensibly than the person who stands near the sheltered one.

The wind is simply air in motion, and air in motion is no colder than the same air in a state of rest. We feel colder in the wind simply because its blowing over us takes the heat away from the body by causing a more rapid evaporation from the skin. There is no evaporation from the dry bulb of a thermometer, and therefore the wind does not affect it.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equalled. Joe Golobick of Colusa, Calif., writes, "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." USEFUL HINTS.

How to Solve Several Perplexing Household Problems.

A quick and easy way to slip a rod through curtains is to pare the end of the rod, put a thimble on the end, and the rod will slip through quite easily without tearing the curtain.

To prevent windows from steaming clean them thoroughly and apply a small quantity of glycerin over the polish with a soft cloth. Rub briskly and lightly until the glycerin is well rubbed in.

To prevent portieres catching underneath the door when opened quickly screw a small ring such as is used for picture frames into the center of the door frame. To this fasten a length of blind cord sufficient to reach to the bottom of the curtain. Put another ring in the center of the door at the top, thread the cord through and fasten to the bottom of the curtains, and as the door is opened so the curtains rise.

Do not throw old incandescent mantles away. They make a splendid polish for silver. Put a little on a soft duster and rub on the article to be cleaned. It will polish beautifully without scratching or marking the silver.

Before cleaning out a fireplace sprinkle a good handful of tea leaves among the ashes. This makes the ashes lift easier and prevents the dust from flying about the room.

When machining soft materials such as silks or muslins pin or tack strips of paper along the parts to be machined so that the paper is next to the teeth of the sewing machine and the work up-ermost. Then the material will not rack or gather, as it otherwise would. Even chiffon can be machined in this way.

Never disturb an invalid by making a noise when putting coals on the fire in the sick room. Put the pieces of coal in paper bags and put both coals and bag on the fire.

How to Wash a Lace Collar.

To wash a lace collar first sew the lace with long stitches upon a double thickness of white flannel, plunge into warm soapsuds and wash, then rinse in clear water to which a little borax and bluing have been added. Gently squeeze in the hand, place between dry flannel and press till dry with a hot iron.

How to Draw an Oval.

Take two stout pins and stick them firmly into the table through the sheet of paper on which you wish to draw the oval, about two inches apart. Then tie together the ends of a bit of string about eight inches long so as to form a loop, leaving two loose ends, each about an inch long. When you have done this tie the loose ends into a smaller loop, which need not be larger than sufficient to admit the point of a pencil. Now place the larger loop over the two pins and, putting the point of your pencil through the smaller loop, stretch the string as far as it will go and circle all around the pins. You will find that in moving from one pin to the other the string forms an ever varying triangle and that the figure described in passing all around the pins is as perfect an oval as the most delicate instrument can produce.

How to Handle Horse Radish.

To have horse radish at its best buy the root, but do not grate it, as it is much easier and saves many tears if you wash and scrape it. Next cut into dice and put it through the finest cylinder of your meat chopper and then into air tight jars so as to retain the full strength until wanted for use.

How to Air Beds.

The directions for airing beds given in a domestic training school are worth noting. Place two chairs with seats together near an open window. Fold the counterpane neatly the long way and lay over the tops of the chairs, allowing the middle to sag down to the seats. Fold the blankets next and place over the counterpane, allowing a space between each for the circulation of air. Proceed in the same way with the rest of the bedclothing. Beat up the pillows and place them where they will get the air.

How to Clean Marble.

Marble can be cleaned by rubbing with a rather soft paste made of whiting or prepared chalk and water to which a little ammonia has been added. Rinse afterward with clean water. A rub with pumice stone and water will restore the polish.

How to Make Water Lily Salad.

Here is a salad that looks as pretty as it sounds and tastes as delicious as it both looks and sounds. Cut the whites of hard boiled eggs into pointed petal-like strips. Save out two or three yolks, but mash the rest. Mix with mayonnaise and fill the middle of the arranged petals with the mixture. Put the remaining yolks through a fine sieve, scatter over the petals to simulate pollen and cut lettuce into points to resemble the outer green.

How to Save Your Stockings.

To save your stockings sew a piece of chamois leather on the inside of the heel of your shoe. This will prevent it rubbing the stocking and so delay the appearance of those dreaded holes.

How to Keep Mold From Jam.

Have ready the covers and as you fill each jar cover at once while boiling hot. This will make them perfectly air tight. Jam, jellies and marmalade made up in this way will keep two or even three years.

A New Petruchian Method

(Original.)

"I hope, Bannard," I said as we sat over our cigars after dinner—Mrs. Bannard had just left the table—"that if ever I marry I'll get a wife who will be as amiable and as lovable as yours."

"If I'm," said Bannard, "you don't give me any credit in the matter."

"You? Credit for your wife's disposition? Why should you deserve credit for that?"

"An answer to your question involves the story of our courtship and early married life, a story I have never given even to my own brother, but—well, if you like I'll give it to you."

"When I met my wife she was Agnes Bugbee, as pretty as a striped wasp and with as malignant a sting. I have the disposition of a sportsman and like to hunt fierce game. It seemed to me there would be an exhilarating zest in winning her from the very fact that it would be difficult."

"It was when automobiles first came in vogue, and I owned a very nice one—at least nice for that time—which I used to make an occasional call on Miss Bugbee. She said she detested to see gentlemen make engineers of themselves and vowed she would never ride in one. I told her mine wasn't safe for women and on no account would I permit a woman to ride with me. I had no sooner spoken than she excused herself for a few minutes, went upstairs, came down dressed to go out and informed me that she had concluded to ride with me. I declined to take her, whereupon she declared that I could either do so or not trouble myself to call again. Then, of course, I consented to take her for a spin."

"This is a sample of the ways and means I adopted to circumvent her—that is, I always opposed what I wanted. I was constantly looking for the soft spot in her heart, but did not discover it. A year passed, and I was as far from bringing down the game as ever. But there was one result I had not counted on. The effort to win her, her refusing to be won, began to work on my own heart, and I finally discovered that unless I succeeded I would be miserable for life."

"Well, at last I made up my mind that if I was going to win Agnes Bugbee I must do so in the way I had accomplished all the results I had gained—that is, by feigning opposition. I wrote her a note stating that a certain young woman, whom I knew she hated, was doing her a great injury, connecting her name very disagreeably with mine, and I saw no way to protect her except to discontinue my visits. I received a reply by my messenger demanding to know just what had been reported, whereupon I wrote that the slanderer had declared that she (Miss Bugbee) had been trying for a year to marry me and failed and would continue to fail. I intimated in as modest language as I could command that the tattle intended to marry me herself. A reply came inviting me to call that evening."

"I called and found Miss Bugbee arrayed in her most becoming costume. She received me with more graciousness than usual, making an excuse for me to sit beside her on a sofa and moving so near to me that a sheet of tissue paper couldn't find room between us. Then she bent forward, placing her waist where I could not very well help encircling it, and—well, I made a proposal and was accepted."

"I've been told that most men who have been trying their best to get a woman experience a singular reaction soon after they have succeeded. It came to me. I looked with horror at spending my life with a woman whom I could never master except by feigning to oppose what I desired. This probably saved me from a life of misery, for I resolved that I would tear my heart out rather than incur the certainty of living a henpecked life. After the reaction passed off I again realized that my betrothed was necessary to me. Then I thought out a plan—a plan that could only be put into execution after marriage and by the exercise of great self control."

"As soon as the ceremony had been performed I confessed to my wife that I had a grudge against the woman who had spread malicious reports about us and had only married to spite this person; that if my wife chose to live with me, knowing this fact, I would be willing, though if I found married life irksome I would move into bachelor quarters."

"This was a trifle more than Mrs. Bannard had bargained for. It made her furious at first, but when she saw me packing my traps to take my departure her disposition, I suppose, to have her own way prevailed, and she unbent. She then and there resolved to win my heart. Whether a desire to spite the other woman had anything to do with it I don't know. For a long while I assumed absolute indifference. One thing I would not do—I declined to quarrel. The moment my wife became vixenish I put on my hat and coat, kissed my hand to her politely and started to leave. She never let me get off the stoop. It took some time to convince her that I was master of the situation and not till she had tried every subterfuge that could be invented by a wily woman. At last she discovered with regard to herself what I had long before discovered in my own case—that I was necessary to her happiness. Since then she has been a model wife."

"A case of Katherine and Petruchio," remarked the listener.

"Not at all. Petruchio overcame a wilder temper than Katherine's."

FARM FIELD AND GARDEN

HANDLING HAY.

The Alfalfa Pole Stacker—Best Location For the Stack Yard.

The picture shows a device quite commonly used for stacking alfalfa in this country. The upright piece is made to turn freely, and the pulley at the base is so placed that the arm is drawn up the rope pulls the arm around so that the hay is deposited in the middle of the stack, on which one or two men are employed after the jag is dumped. The pole is from 7 to 20 feet high to the revolving casting. From the revolving casting to the top of the pole is from 7 to 8 feet. The short arm at the top is 9 feet long and the long arm is 10 feet. The lower braces are about 18 1/2 feet long, while the sled is 10 feet each way between upright braces. The runners are made of 3 by 7 stuff and are about 13 feet long altogether.

THE COLORADO ALFALFA STACKER.

gether. The chief advantage of this stacker is that it can be moved easily. After finishing one stack a team can be hitched on and in twenty minutes be working on a new stack. One of these machines has been used at the Minnesota station for years with entire satisfaction, and they are to be seen on ranches all over Colorado, where the idea originated, says the Denver Field and Farm in presenting the cut.

According to the same authority, much good alfalfa land is spoiled each year by the carelessness and mismanagement of those who grow the crop. It is a common sight to see two or three old stack yards lying idle through an alfalfa field, each one of which may occupy from a quarter to half an acre, and in many cases where the stacks are located singly or in pairs scattered over the field we see the tenants each year selecting a new place to build the stack, perhaps close by an old, deserted spot where a rich stood the year before. Men who have had experience in baling hay say that it can be taken up much cleaner and there is less waste when it has been stacked on a bare piece of ground than when a piece of growing alfalfa has been covered. Old stack butts should be hauled out or burned and the same space used each season for stacking the crop. With land valued at $50 to $200 an acre and hay selling at the present prices, farmers can ill afford to waste so much land for building new stack yards, especially where the land wasted is in good crop and ready to produce money at once.

The Wood Lot.

Probably never before was so much thought given to the fuel and timber question as now. It is a matter that concerns every farmer, and we should not stop here, but should take some action in the matter that will result in the starting of timber plantations, groves and the preservation of some of the forest growth already on our farms. Most of our farms have a portion of land that is better adapted to the growing of wood and timber than to anything else, and care should be exercised that such places be planted to valuable varieties of trees. It will add greatly to the beauty and value of the farm. Now is the time of all the year to make a start in this direction. Let a few trees at least be set out, to add beauty to the landscape and value to the farm, and in very many instances it will be advisable to plant trees on a much more extensive scale for the purpose of furnishing timber and wood to supply needs that are sure to come. The forests of the country are being used up very rapidly, and wood and lumber are increasing in value every year. Hemlock lumber has nearly doubled in price in the last ten years. Are these things not worth the serious consideration of the American farmer?—Cor. National Stockman.

Grading Hay.

Farmers will find it an advantage to grade their hay at harvest time, putting the different kinds of qualities by themselves, where they can be had as wanted. This is particularly desirable where dairies are kept and the best is wanted for the cows. On farms where a second crop of hay is secured early harvesting, of course, is of the utmost importance, and wherever rightly practiced I think the custom of early harvesting will be found best, says a western farmer.

Cantaloupe Blight.

When blight strikes the cantaloupes it will be noticed that the leaf tissue is being eaten away where the fungus is at work, and it is the decomposition or dying of this tissue that causes the brown spots. These spots are the result of the blight.

An... UNHEROIC VICTORY

By....
Gertrude Halliday

Copyright, 1903, by Gertrude Halliday

PAULINE SEWALL came into her chamber and sat down abstractedly before her dressing table. She had been married little more than a month, and her first quarrel with her husband had taken place not quite five minutes before. She had left the scene of the conflict with the proud air of a victorious general withdrawing his troops, but now, as she sat down to review the battle, her heart sank with the heavy consciousness that she had had decidedly the worst of it.

It was not that she had not a glorious cause, nor could she claim that she had been taken unawares. Pauline had long foreseen and been prepared for this struggle. Her array of arguments, firm and invulnerable, had been drawn up in line of battle and reviewed many times. Words were to be the only weapons. Tears, the exclusive and overwhelming allies of her sex, were to be scornfully rejected. There should be a fair contest, in which man, traditional oppressor, serene and invulnerable of defeat, should be overcome on his own field of action and with his own methods of warfare, but so courteously and with so little dashing of arms and war of artillery that he might secretly know himself beaten, and peace was to follow, immediate and lasting.

Few campaigns, however, follow the exact lines marked out for them. The attack had come so sudden. That glittering line of argument, so invulnerable when on parade, had fled helter skelter. A horrid sense of confusion, the sharp sting of a wound, a blind skirmish with poisoned arrows—obsolete and unworthy weapon—and the slight of the enemy, man, in agony, and down goes woman once more, vanquished by herself.

Pauline drew a sharp breath and, turning quickly, took up her husband's photograph to study it intently and curiously, as if she had never seen it before. She herself was twenty-three. She had married a man of sixty. She had secretly feared and adored this man, her father's friend, all through her girlhood, admiring him for the ability which had brought him, a typical "self made" man, from a grand log to owner of one of the largest dry goods shops in New York, paying him for his misfortune, the happy, work-mind, who had died five years ago, and his two sons, both well and bad, who had done their momentary best to ruin him and his fortune.

The story was commonplace enough, but it had come very close to Pauline, who had watched the fortune and strength of her hero from day to day for so many years.

There had been plenty of people, at the announcement of Mr. Sewall's second engagement, who had whispered of doing old men and portionless girls who married for money, but Pauline had no illusions as to the position of things. She knew very well that he was marrying her for nothing more sentimental than that he wished a sensible and agreeable companion for his old age.

During the past month she had watched and studied him with an interest greater than she had ever felt before. She had been amused and touched by the evident relief he felt at the orderliness and regularity of his household arrangements. His surprise at the modesty of their first month's bills had been positively pathetic.

"Are these all?" he had said, tapping the pile she had presented with a peremptory finger and looking up from under his heavy brows in his searching way.

"Are you so anxious for more?" she had retorted, blushing, and he had commented shortly, "Yet we have lived very well."

One or twice she had caught an appreciative twinkle in his eye, when she had boldly and safely stood out against his will in some small matter. Mr. Sewall was in the habit of reading his morning paper at the breakfast table, a habit he resumed after the wedding journey. Pauline eyed him askance for several mornings, saying nothing. Then one night she brought a book to the dinner table and read demurely throughout the meal. It seemed ominous to her that her husband made no sign, but toward the end of dessert one of her uneasy, reconnoitering glances met a very quizzical one from him, and that conflict was won by a laugh and a blush.

There was, however, just one thing which Pauline had known from the first would cause trouble between her husband and herself. She had one brother, a weak and shambling apology of a man, resembling sufficiently Mr. Sewall's own two sons, but Pauline cherished for John Cowden a pitying and unshakable affection, such as his mother might have felt if she had lived. His frequent appeals for money to his father had long since been received with indifference, but Pauline was never weary with sympathy and excuse and stubbornly continued to divide with him whatever small store of spending money came to her purse, though much against the wishes of her family. Mr. Sewall had said to her shortly before their wedding, "I wish you to understand, Pauline, that though I shall settle a certain amount on you every year for your own personal use, not one cent of my money is ever to be thrown away on John Cowden." The girl had stiffened and reddened, opening her lips as if to speak and then sitting silent. She had her own ideas on this subject, assuring herself sturdily that a man and his wife should have equal right to their united resources, and from her personal allowance she had long since decided that "helping John" should take whatever she could spare, even though in open rebellion against her husband's wishes. She should make no secret of it, nor yet would she seem either to beg from him or defy him by mentioning it beforehand.

Nothing more had been said on the subject until this evening, when she had been summoned before her husband. He was sitting at his desk in the library, and his expression, stern and forbidding, had warned her that the expected was about to happen.

There was no preamble. "I have a letter from your father," he began abruptly, "in which he says your brother has been tagged a millionaire, will 'keep him in the' hereafter." Mr. Sewall's voice was very hard, and the words "tagged a millionaire" were said with a sneer which made Pauline wince.

"You admit it, then?" her husband broke in furiously. The loss of self control in this man seemed so impossible and so unexpected that his wife started back in alarm. His voice had in it all the despairing rage of a creature which feels again the familiar grip of the trap from which it had thought itself forever free. "Woman as you are, I wonder that you own so much. Before we were married I ordered you never to give one cent of my money to your worthless scoundrel of a brother. Have you forgotten it? Answer me!"

Pauline's twentieth-century spirit rose. "It was my money, not yours," she said defiantly, "and why should you order me to do anything? I am not a child."

"You are my wife!"

"I suppose you mean your slave,"

"I married you, Pauline," said Mr. Sewall, with contemptuous bitterness, "because I thought you would make me an efficient and obedient housekeeper. I trusted that your father's daughter would have some good sense and discretion, but I see."

"That you are like the rest—without reason or honor. It is not your fault, I suppose, since you are a woman."

Joseph Sewall's miserable experience had made it impossible for him to realize the effect of such words as these on a sensitive woman who loved him. Pauline lashed out wildly. "You married me, then, to be a servant without wages who cannot give up her place. Very well, I have my revenge, for I married you, an old man who might have been my father, simply and solely for your money!" Then she had turned and fled from the room without another glance at the frozen figure at the desk.

Pauline shut the eyes of her imagination when she thought of the future. Remorse, together with many extenuations of her husband's words, was already hard at work within her. She did not go downstairs again that night. In the morning when she went to breakfast her husband had already gone. All day long she wandered from one trivial employment to another, restless and discontented, feeling for the first time the disadvantage of being a rich woman with servants' hands to fulfill all the necessary duties of life.

Over and over again she reviewed despairingly the scene of the night before, wondering how she had ever come to fling that cruel, taunting, but her own earlier reflections had brought such quick forgiveness for her husband that she grew hopeful for herself, so that she was woefully disappointed when he did not appear at dinner time.

It was only at 9 o'clock that she heard him come in and go to the library. Presently he sent for her, and she went to him with a most contrite spirit, determined to do her utmost by apology and conciliation, no matter what he might do or say. But she was scarcely prepared for the ominous whiteness of his set face or the judicious sternness of his demeanor as he sat at his desk with a couple of official looking documents under his hand.

Pauline stood before him, hesitating appealingly. Her husband's eyes met hers without a change from their stony calm. All at once it came over the girl what a task she had undertaken—to make this hard old man of the world love and trust an undisciplined and inexperienced creature like herself—and how miserably and soon she had come to utter failure.

Joseph Sewall looked at his wife's face, pale and flushing, and at her quivering lips. He believed she had spoken the truth in her anger the night before. He saw nothing in her expression now but fear of the consequences. And Pauline, on her side, saw only the sneer in his searching eyes, and her own hardened, and she straightened and felt no more dread, but only a patient sense of inevitable misery.

Mr. Sewall spoke first. "You informed me last night," he began coldly, "that your reason for becoming my wife was through no regard for myself, as you had pretended, but simply to reap the advantage of my money. Such a condition of affairs naturally excludes you from any claim henceforth to my regard. It does not constitute, I believe, a reason for divorcing a wife, but I can at least prevent you from realizing your expectations. Since money is your only object I shall make it my business to deprive you of that in the future as completely as lies in my power. I have totally altered my will, leaving you at my death exactly what the law allows and not a penny more. I have also made out a list"—Mr. Sewall raised a paper from the desk without moving his eyes from his wife's white face—"of certain shops at which you can order, I think, whatever you need for your clothing and other necessities. If there is anything I have omitted, I will add to the list when advisable. The bills will be sent to me every month. Your brother-in-law will of course be ready at any time to take you wherever you may wish to go. But," added Mr. Sewall, raising his voice slightly, "you shall never again, if it is in my power, touch one cent of my money while I live."

He stepped and held out the list toward his wife. Whatever outburst of rage or hysteria his experience or the bitterness of his spirit may have led him to expect, nothing followed. Pauline took the paper mechanically from his hand and went quietly and without a word out of the room.

In the days that followed there came to her a curious sense of relief, almost of rest. Her doom had fallen, and there was a sort of poetic justice about this curious punishment—or revenge. But there came to her, oddly enough, a first faint feeling of hope from the fact that she had succeeded in moving the man so deeply. She retreated keenly what had happened, and though it had been put out of her power to confess her remorse, she had been shown a way to suffer for it.

The practical discomforts of the new order of things showed themselves promptly. She had emptied her purse of all the change which had happened to be in it, sending somewhat dramatically the few bills and coins in an envelope, and put it in a corner of the desk, wondering, half childishly, if her husband would ever realize she was too proud to take even this advantage of his forgetfulness or generosity.

"Excuse me, Mrs. Sewall, but the man has finished mending the window and wants to know will you pay him the 50 cents now?"

"The postman is at the door, ma'am. He'll be wanting 10 cents extra on a letter, ma'am."

"It's my afternoon out, Mrs. Sewall, and could you advance me a dollar or two on my wages, please?"

Poor Mrs. Sewall had hard work at first to conceal her confusion on these embarrassing occasions, but her answer was invariably, "I am very busy, Maggie. You had better go to Mr. Sewall when he comes home." And at length the servants came to know it was no use to apply to her.

"This is a nice lady," they would whisper among themselves—"there ain't many nicer—but it's wicked the way she shoves everything on that poor man. It's easy to see, too, that he ain't any too fond of her."

Indeed, there was little communication during these days between husband and wife. Pauline took a piteous pleasure in making life as luxurious as possible for him.

Joseph Sewall was not a clubman. He came home regularly to his home-

what silent but invariably delicious dinners. He and Pauline had sometimes a little conversation about politics or purely impersonal matters of the day. He scarcely realized it until it had become quite usual. He had never before thought it worth while to talk to women about such things. Once or twice he spoke of books, but the conversation had lagged and he found himself saving his self respect with the excuse that men have nowadays less time for reading than women. Excepting for the thought of that one night, he would have been more at peace than ever before, but that ugly memory would not leave him.

No Pity Shown.

"For years fate was after me continuously," writes F. A. Gullidge, Verbena, Ala. "I had a terrible case of Piles causing 24 tumors. When all failed Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me." Equally good for Burns and all aches and pains. Only 25c at John E. Daly's Drug Store.

ROMAN HOT BATHS.

They May Have Caused the Downfall of the Imperial City.

When Rome was in her glory and men were strong and women beautiful, they set first importance upon the bath. There were 800 public baths in Imperial Rome.

Before taking a bath the Roman took a little exercise. In the later history of Rome the room in which he undressed was heated, and after undressing he was anointed with oil. Then came the scratching and rubbing of the skin with the strigil. Following this perspiration was promoted by heated air or a hot bath. The bath was completed with a cold douche or cold plunge. Finally the body was anointed again.

It is believed by many writers that the introduction of the hot bath in the place of the cold bath among the Romans was the principal cause of their downfall. The luxury of the hot bath was weakening and destroyed that personal valor and hardihood for which the Romans were notorious in their earlier history.

Little by little the enervating influence of the hot bath gradually sapped away the vitality of the Roman soldier until the more hardy men of the north found them very easy foes to conquer.—Medical Talk.

Passing of the Aristocrats.

The Revolution, in giving us a separate nationality, had not destroyed time honored traditions. Our manners and customs were English, bred in the bone; our point of view that of the mother country. Freedom and equality were political terms that no one dreamed of applying to social life. What gave position at that time was inherited distinction. Its possession was free from self consciousness—simply an advantage of birth, which that Providence who had always shown an affinity to hierarchies saw fit to bestow on a favored class. The community was divided by the grace of God into gentlemen—and others; perhaps it would be more exact to say gentlemen, their servants and others. The privacy of these gentlemen concerned themselves only. There were no "social happenings" heralded in their newspapers to force notoriety upon family life. How it would have astonished those early aristocrats if they could have anticipated the fictitious importance later days would attach to their privileges!—Elizabeth Duer in Smart Set.

Oriental Jugglery.

An eyewitness of a celebrated feat of oriental jugglery tells the following story of what he thought he saw a band of Indian fakirs accomplish: "They produced a chain seventy-five feet in length and in my presence threw one end of it toward the sky, where it remained as if fastened to something in the air. A dog was then brought forward and, being placed at the lower end of the chain, immediately ran up and, reaching the other end, disappeared in the air. In the same manner a hog, a panther, a lion and a tiger were successively sent up the chain, and all disappeared at the upper end. At last they pulled down the chain and put it in a bag, no one ever discovering in what manner the different animals were made to vanish."

Spanish Brides.

There are no bridesmaids at a Spanish wedding, but instead a madrina (literally godmother) is present with the witnesses. There is no bride cake, but there is a reception and very often a feast after the ceremony. Before the wedding takes place the bride's new home is made ready for her reception, for the honeymooners do not start on their travels until the day after their marriage.

Before their departure they pay a polite visit to their respective parents. On their return dainty sweetmeats in pretty boxes are sent round to their friends. No visits are paid till little cards have been sent "offering their house."

A Lightning Change Artist.

The rapidity with which charadeons change their color is marvellous. You gather one from an outdoor shrub and it immediately becomes dark, almost black, lustrous and with its mouth wide open, threatening to bite. Meanwhile it is never still, but continues to crawl upward whenever possible—up you, up your sleeve, always upward. By degrees the angry black changes into whatever color is nearest. If one's dress is of a brownish color so is the charadeon's.

Greed.

"Don't you think that people pay too much attention to money nowadays?" "No, I don't," answered Senator Sorghum. "Time was when a five dollar bill looked as big as a farm to a member of the legislature. Now he won't pay any attention to it whatever."—Washington Star.

Expert at It.

Townley—This paper says that one of those idiotic colleges is going to make Senator Boodier a "doctor of laws."

Brownley—Well, that's appropriate enough. He doctors the laws every time he gets a chance.—Exchange.

A Money Saver.

City Guest—Why don't you have your windows washed, landlord? I can't see out.

Country Innkeeper—No, don't want 'em cleaned. If they were clean I'd have to get curtains to keep the sun out.

Men do not change much, after all. Three hundred years ago a wise man wrote this: "A man knows little who tells his wife all he knows."—Atchison Globe.

Although Secretary Root, of the Department, has temporarily tracked the opium business in the Philippines in order to get the ple to quit thinking about it, it is undoubtedly the intention of the American administration to establish opium monopoly in those islands. When it does it will receive a rake-off amounting to one hundred and fifty thousand dollars per annum. This of monopoly should work wonders in the archipelago. The merits of him as a Christianizing and civilizing agency are well established. Perhaps the Government obtained valuable pointers from Downing street in regard to the advantages of opium monopoly.

The British have done a lucrative and flourishing business in opium ever since they introduced it in China. Considering the splendid effects which the dope has produced in the distasteful regions, Taft's Government is every reason to be exuberantly optimistic about the consequences to follow the setting up of an opium monopoly in the Philippine Islands. He does should prove more efficacious than Bibles and guns.

Wausau is having a time over the dog question. Recently the common council of that beautiful little city decreed that the dogs should run at large or more, and the law is being enforced. W. H. Ellis, the publisher of the "Philosopher," published an article in his little magazine, in which he roasts the mayor and common council on the dog question, and then takes a whack at them on several other subjects, in which he stated that the city government was extravagant, incompetent and a set of scallawags all around. William H. don't want the dogs shut up and thinks that it is a shame that they should be, but from what the local press say up there he seems to stand all alone on the proposition.

Senator Hagemeister is thinking of retiring from politics and jumping his job as state senator, and the Green Bay Gazette says that "his retirement will be a misfortune which the state and district will have to bear." Yes, it will be an awful misfortune if the senator should retire, but so long as he continues to manufacture the same quality of beer as heretofore, we cannot see how his retirement will affect the people in this region to any great extent.

It is reported that Mark Hanna is considering the acceptance of the nomination for vice president. It must be that Mark is seeking for political oblivion. There was never but one man who survived the vice-presidency, and it was a case of luck with him.

A telegram from Butte, Montana, on July 2d chronicled the fact that a snowstorm was in progress there and that the indications were that the fall would be a heavy one, and yet some people kick on the changeableness of Wisconsin weather.

A proper drink: At the Louisiana Purchase exposition a milk lunch will be maintained under the auspices of the Wisconsin fair commissioners. This is a concession to the cow that should prove gratifying to the dairy interests of the state and especially to John Coit Spooner, the distinguished "friend of the cow."

At the Wisconsin headquarters these will be constantly on tap, day and night, fresh milk to cheer the weary and to quench the Badger thirst. It will be more sustaining than Waukesha water and less exhilarating than the fluid with which the Milwaukee fire boat was christened. There is no better drink than a glass of cold milk, fresh from the refrigerator. No man ever went "broke" drinking milk. It is a strictly proper drink and the Wisconsin commissioners have shown excellent judgment in providing a place where it may be had without inviting suspicion or scandal. —Milwaukee News.

Big Timber Deal.

One of the largest land and timber transfers that has been negotiated in northern Wisconsin for several years was consummated in Milwaukee on Monday, when the Wisconsin Central railway, through its land department, sold to the Roddis Veneer company of Marshfield, 35,000 acres of hardwood timber land in the vicinity of Park Falls. While the terms of sale could not be learned, it is said that over $150,000 was paid by the Marshfield company for the right to cut the timber from the lands leased from the road, and for the many thousands of acres which were purchased outright. The Roddis Veneer company, whose main plant and mills are located at Marshfield, is said to be one of the largest, if not the largest, industries of its kind in America. The company manufactures all kinds of hardwood veneers, but the main part of its business is given over to what is now known as built up panel work.

Worth 75 Cents Now.

The attention of the residents of Wood county outside of the city is called to the fact that the recent legislature passed a law changing the old way of registering births in towns and villages. The report hereafter will have to be made to the town clerk instead of the health officer as heretofore and for each report made the person reporting receives a fee of fifty cents for complying with the law, and twenty-five cents for the report, making a total of seventy-five cents for each birth reported. When there is no doctor in attendance the householder or parents can make report. The law for the registering of the births in cities has not been changed.

Annual Horse Show.

Milwaukee will have its first annual horse show in the Exposition building the week of July 20, and judging from the amount of interest reflected by the press of that city it is to be a great success. High bred horses from Wisconsin and adjoining states, and even from far away Virginia, have been entered in the various classes. Society people from all the important cities of the west have already bought boxes, about 100 of them selling at $100 apiece while others have brought $75 and $50 each. The Exposition building is being rearranged for the express purpose of accommodating the immense attendance that is anticipated.

Man Had Disappeared.

A woman was in the city on Tuesday looking for a party named Charles Burckhardt. She came from Kendall, Wis., and stated that Burckhardt had left Kendall some six weeks before to look up a location to go into business, having in his possession a sum of money that he had obtained by selling his business at Kendall. When last heard from the woman had got no information concerning the missing man.

Some one in your town this season is going to do a better business than last year. The question to be decided is—who is going to be the one? Every merchant wants to do more business than last year and believes he has the right lines laid down for the accomplishment of what he proposes. If he does not run up against a proposition which spoils his plans, he should succeed, if the plan has been well considered at the outset. If there has been an opening for any one class of work and that class has been considered, and the plans perfected which would bring about the desired end, there will be a great deal of good for the merchant and much satisfaction for customers at the same time. Think out the plan and push the thing thru a hard campaign until the test has proven the wisdom of the work.

—Indigestion arises from a weakened condition of the stomach, caused by over eating, or eating indigestible or improperly cooked food, alcoholic drinks, etc., thus exhausting nerve force and the stomach resulting in indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness and constipation. A cure of these complaints can be effected in a short time by the regular use of Re-Go, the famous Tonic Laxative Syrup. The expense is only 25 or 50 cents and is only 26 or 50 cents and is certainly a modest doctor bill. Re-Go is sold by Sam Church.

Fruit as Food and Medicine.

That fruit has many uses besides pleasing the taste is well known, but the exact properties of each kind are not so well understood by the consumers, and a few suggestions on the subject may not be amiss, says the Christian Work.

Fruit alone will not sustain life for any great length of time, but helps to furnish a variety in the diet.

It stimulates and improves appetite and digestion, relieves thirst, and introduces water into the system, acts as a laxative or astringent, stimulates the kidneys, and supplies the organic salts necessary to proper nutrition.

If the medical uses of fruit were understood and care taken to used the appropriate kinds much less medical treatment would be needed.

Among the laxatives are figs, prunes, dates, nectarines, oranges, and mulberries.

The astringents are blackberries, dewberries, raspberries, pomegranates, quinces, pears, wild cherries, cranberries, and medlars.

The kinds used for diuretic are grapes, black currants, peaches, whortle-berries, and prickly pears. The refrigerants are red and white currants, gooseberries, lemons, limes and apples.

Apples are useful as a stomach sedative and will relieve nausea and even seasickness.

Grapes and raisins are nutritive and demulcent, making them excellent for the sickroom.

It is sometimes difficult to keep raisins, figs, and dates away from the inquisitive little ants and roaches, but this is easily accomplished by putting in paper bags that have been well brushed over with strong borax water and dried before the fruit is put in. The little pests do not like the borax and will not gnaw through the sack when thus prepared.

A fig split open makes a good poultice for a boil. It is especially useful for gumboil. A split raisin is also good.

Lemons are useful in health and sickness. Hot lemonade is one of the best remedies for an incipient cold. It is also excellent in case of biliousness. For malaria the "Roman cure" is prepared by cutting the rind and pulp of a lemon into a pint of water, then boiling until there is only a half pint. One teaspoonful is taken before each meal. This has cured obstinate cases when quinine failed.

Lemon syrup, made by baking a lemon twenty minutes and then squeezing the juice upon half a cup of sugar is excellent for hoarseness and to break up a cold.

—A. R. Bass of Morgantown, Ind., had to get up ten or twelve times in the night, and had a severe backache and pains in the kidneys. Was cured by Foley's Kidney Cure. Sold by Johnson & Hill Co.

BRIEF CITY ITEMS

Turned Over the Premises.—Professors Whitson and Sanden from the state University were in the city on Thursday evening and met with representatives of the Wisconsin State Cranberry Growers association and a transfer was made of the experimental station to the state. The officers of the association wish it stated, however, that the turning over of these grounds to the state does not mean that they will discontinue their work. In fact, they expect that the work of the experts will assist them to give the growers more statistics and information than they were able to do before. Messrs. Ramsey and Haskins have been stationed at the experimental station and expect to spend all their time there. Both are from the university.

The Journal Band Concert.—The program to be given by the Journal Newsboys' Band in this city on July 15 will follow closely the program given at the famous Happy Hours meetings of The Journal Newsboys' Association. It is claimed for some of the soloists that they are the finest for their age in the world. Henry Winsauer the violinist is only 16 years old, yet he will graduate next year from the Conservatory of Music and may be sent to complete his education to Boston or perhaps to Germany. It is doubtful if young Winsauer has an equal in America, age considered.

To Arrange Program.—There will be a meeting at the office of Judge Gaynor next Sunday afternoon of all of the committees of the Wisconsin State Cranberry Growers Association for the purpose of arranging the program for the August meeting of that Association. The meeting this year will be an unusually interesting one, as many have signified their intention of being present who will add greatly to the occasion. The meeting will be held at the Gaynor-Blackstone Marsh, and a feature of the occasion will be the picnic dinner.

Have Surrendered Charter.—The Knights of Pythias of this city have surrendered their charter and gone out of business, owing to the lack of interest of the members. The financial end of the organization was in a healthy enough condition, but nobody cared to assume enough responsibility to attend meetings regularly. One would think from this that there were enough lodges in town, but still the work of organizing new ones goes merrily on.

Chance to Make Money.—Those having in charge the concert to be given by the Journal Newsboy band, offer the young people twenty-five cents for every six tickets they sell to the entertainment. Anybody can sell tickets that wants to, and as the entertainment is for the benefit of the high school athletic team they should go like hot cakes. Tickets will be 25 and 35 cents.

Died at the Asylum.—County Judge Conway received word last week that Christ Boeschstein had died at the Waupaca county insane asylum. Boeschstein was a county charge and was brought here from Milwaukee last winter and committed to the asylum. He was at one time fairly well to do, as mechanics go, having worked at his trade of tinsmith here for a number of years.

A Fierce Storm.—One of the fiercest electric storms that has visited this section in many a day was on Thursday evening, when the rain fell in torrents and the continuous flash of lightning and roar of thunder made it anything but pleasant. Two and three-tenths inches of water fell in a very short time, and the streets were a raging torrent for about an hour.

Decision Reversed.—The case of Wells against the town of Remington which was argued before the supreme court last month, was decided in favor of the plaintiff on Friday, reversing the decision of the circuit court, which means that the case will be given a new trial. B. R. Goggins was attorney for the plaintiff.

Has Installed Power.—George F. Krieger has had an electric motor placed in his shop on the west side and is now able to turn out work much more expeditiously than heretofore. The electric motor is becoming quite a factor in furnishing power in this city.

Working on Bridge.—The bridge builders arrived in the city again last week and since then have been carrying forward the work of rebuilding on that structure. The work seems to move very slowly, but possibly this may be a mistake.

Glee Club Coming.—The T. C. Glee Club of the University will give a concert in this city at the M. E. church on the evening of July 11th. Among the members of the club this year is Edgar Kellogg, who has considerable talent as a singer.

Hunt Case Opened Again.—The famous Hunt case was opened again at the court house on Monday before Judge Webb. The interested parties expect that it will consume about two weeks more before the case is completed.

No False Claims.

The proprietors of Foley's Honey and Tar do not advertise this as a "sure cure for consumption." They do not claim it will cure this dread complaint in advanced cases, but do positively assert that it will cure in the earlier stages and never fails to give comfort and relief in the worst cases. Foley's Honey and Tar is without doubt the greatest throat and lung remedy. Refuse substitutes. For sale by Johnson & Hill Co.

Ellis Tucker.

Dan Ellis of this city and Miss Kate Tucker of Nekoosa were married on Sunday at Nekoosa at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Sarah Tucker, Rev. Mr. Pickney officiating. The young people left the next day for Kaukauna on a short wedding trip after which they will make their home in this city. The Tribune extends congratulations.

Crushed by a Wagon Wheel.

Bert Joling of Vesper was killed on Thursday last by falling beneath a wagon loaded with cordwood, the wheel passing over his head and crushing it, killing him instantly.

The boy was only six years old and was a son of John Joling. John Joling, jr., was riding with him, and his younger brother was riding with him.

when the wagon struck a rut and the little fellow fell off and before the team could be stopped the wheel had passed over his head.

The funeral occurred on Saturday from the Christian Reformed church near Vesper, Rev. Delany conducting the services.

Wagner as an Acrobat.
Ferdinand Wagner related an incident of a visit to Wagner at his Swiss home. The two men sat one morning on an ottoman in the drawing room talking over the events of the years.
Suddenly Wagner, who was sixty years old, rose and stood on his head upon the ottoman.
At that moment Wagner's wife entered. Her surprise and alarm caused her to run to her husband, exclaiming, "Ah, Richard, Richard!" Quickly recovering himself, he assured her that he was sane and wished to show that he could stand on his head at sixty, which was more than Ferdinand could do.

Frogs and Snakes.
The common snake is very fond of water. Its food consists exclusively of frogs and fishes. All snakes eat either living food, including eggs, or creatures they have themselves killed. When pursued by a snake the frog seems to be half paralyzed with fear, leaping less and less powerfully as the snake approaches it more nearly and uttering feeble cries. If a stick be so pushed through the grass toward a frog as to imitate the movement of a snake the frog will exhibit the symptoms of terror just noted.

Contradicted.
"I never waste words on a fool," said the pompous person.
"That doesn't correspond with your wife's statement," replied a member of the skeptical faction.

True Gratitude.
At Wichita a woman passing along the street with an armful of packages dropped her purse, containing $750. A gentleman found the purse and returned it to her. "Oh, how grateful I am!" she exclaimed. GOLD CANNON BALLS.

The Jungle Hidden Treasure of an East Indian Princess.

Not long ago an old peasant was wandering in the jungle about half a mile from the city of Ahmadnager, in India, when he found a round ball of metal. It was black and looked like an old iron round shot, but when the old man lifted it he was struck with its immense weight. He carried it home and found on scratching it that it was a lump of solid gold. It weighed eight pounds and its sale made the finder rich for life.

There are many more of these cannon balls, each worth a small fortune, lying hid or buried in the recesses of this jungle, and their story is a curious one. At the end of the sixteenth century Akbar, the greatest emperor Hindustan ever saw, was at the height of his glory. At the head of his conquering army he summoned Ahmadnager to surrender. The city and its rich treasure were then under the rule of the Princess Candé. Knowing that resistance could be but short, and in bitter rage against the oppressor, she caused all the treasure of gold and silver to be melted down. She cast the metal into cannon balls and engraved upon each maledictions against the conqueror. When these were fired into the jungle and when Akbar entered the city, instead of the rich hoard he had hoped to win, he found a treasury absolutely empty.

That this is not the only occasion upon which cannon balls of gold have been cast is proved by the fact that in the treasury of the shah of Persia there may be seen in the same room where stands the famous peacock throne two small globular projectiles of gold. They were estimated by a recent visitor to weigh about thirty-one pounds each and are roughly made. Their origin or purpose is, however, totally forgotten. It is only known that they are very old.—Chicago Chronicle.

THE SHANK OF THE SHOE.

What the Glazed, Metallic Marks Thereon Told the Broker.

Half a score of clerks in one of the largest brokerage houses in New York were astounded one morning when one by one they were called into their employer's private office and asked to hold up their feet and show the shanks of their shoes. They thought the "old man" had gone quite mad. Each young man as he entered the office was told to sit down and put his foot up on a corner of the desk where it could be examined. Then the head of the house put on his glasses and very carefully scrutinized the shank of the shoe.

When all had been put through this examination he called the entire force of clerks into his office and explained to them why this unusual examination had been made.
"You are well aware," said he "that I will not have a drinking man in my employ if I know it. For some time I have had good reasons for believing that several of the young men before me have been indulging quite too much. Now I know it. Here are the marks of the bar rail on the bottoms of your shoes."

Several of the young men, braced themselves against the wall and lifted their feet as a blacksmith lifts the foot of a horse. Sure enough, there were the glazed, metallic marks of the dry leather. They were the evidences of guilt, and the young men's faces showed it.

"It's unmistakable proof," said the head of the house. "You may fix up your breath at the drug store and the barber can clean up your eyes and face, but you neglect the shanks of your shoes."
That afternoon three young men cleaned out their desks and gave the keys to the managing clerk.—New York Herald.

Care of Books.

A lover of books will always take good care of them. He never holds the book by the corner of the cover, never turns down leaves, never lays the book down open, either with the face downward or on its back, and never breaks the binding by opening the book too forcibly. He turns the leaves one by one, taking great care not to soil or tear them, and uses the volume gently. It makes no difference if the book be clean or worn; he always handles it gently.

Quite Impartial.

Mrs. Hiram Offen: I understand you to say you're a good, all round cook, but of course you must have some favorite dishes?
Applaud—No, ma'am. They're all wan to me. Of'm not the kind to be considerin' whether a dish is cheap or expensive when Of'm breakin' it.—Washington Post Informing.

"Who lives in that big house on the corner, Dennis?"
"The Widdy O'Malley, sor, who is dead."
"Indeed! When did she die?"
"If she had lived till next Sunday she would have been dead a year."—Kansas City Journal.

A Failure.

"See here, young man!" said the minister. "You never paid me that fee for marrying you."
"You're mighty lucky I haven't sued you for damages."—London Tit-Bits.

Still More Autocratic.

Knicker—No, indeed. He got a position as janitor.—Smart Set.

Old Time Tipping.

The tipping habit is bad enough everywhere, and is worse in Europe than here. In the eighteenth century it was a greater evil than it is now. A writer in the Cornhill Magazine tells some stories to illustrate the old condition of things.

In Edinburgh in 1760 the Society of Clerks enacted that all servants should be forbidden to take tips and members be forbidden to give them. This example was followed by other clubs and societies. Today there is the rule in most clubs against tipping the servants.

An eccentric Irish gentleman, Lord Taaffe, used to attend his guests to the door, and if they offered any money to the servants who were lined up with the guests' baggage, the host would say, "If you give, give it me, for it was I that did buy the dinner."

A well known colonel while sitting at dinner inquired the names of the host's servants. "For," said he, "I cannot pay them for such a good dinner, but I should like to remember them in my will."

Another eccentric gentleman, after patiently redeeming his hat, sword, cane and cloak, to the very bottom of his purse, turned to the two remaining servants who were waiting obsequiously, each with a glove, and said affably: "Keep those. I will not trouble to buy them back. They are old and not worth a shilling."

Power of a Swan's Wing.

"Swans," said an official of the zoo, "have great strength of wing. It is said that with a blow of its wing a swan can break a man's leg, and I have no doubt this is so. A doctor told me one day, as we stood together by the zoo lake, that one of his first cases had been that of a man whose arm a swan had broken with its wing."

"The accident occurred in Arkansas, on Swan lake, a body of water where these birds abound. A huntsman was 'fire hunting,' when a swan, making for the light, flew straight at his head. He put up his arm to shield his face, and the powerful wing of the big white bird struck him like a club. Both bones in the forearm were broken; it was a compound fracture."

"If a swan accidentally can break in this way a man's arm, there is, in my opinion, no room to doubt that it could, if it desired, break with a well directed blow a man's leg."—Philadelphia Record.

What a Toad Enjoys.

There are few things more amusing than to watch a toad submitting to the operation of a back scratching. He will at first look somewhat suspiciously at the twig which you are advancing toward him. But after two or three passes down his back his manner undergoes a marked change, his eyes close with an expression of infinite rapture, he plants his feet wider apart and his body swells out to nearly double its ordinary size, as if to obtain by these means more room for enjoyment.

Thus he will remain until you make some sudden movement which startles him, or until he has had as much petting as he wants, when, with a puff of regretful delight, he will reduce himself to his usual dimensions and hop away, bent once more on the pleasures of the chase.

The Band Played.

General Custer believed in having martial music on all possible occasions. He would have the band out at 5 o'clock in the morning and the last thing in the evening. One day when a regiment had just come into camp General Custer ordered the band out. The men were tired and reported that they had lost the mouthpieces of their instruments.

"Very well," said the general. "You may take pickaxes and shovels and help repair the roads. You may find the missing mouthpieces while you are working." It is unnecessary to state that the band played soon after.

Through the Cracks.

When the celebrated divine, Edward Irving, was on a preaching tour in Scotland two Dumfries men of decided opinions went to hear him. When they left the hall one said to the other: "Well, Willie, what do you think?"
"Oh," said the other contemptuously, "the man's cracked!"
The first speaker laid a quiet hand on his shoulder.

"Well," said he, "you'll often see a light peeping through a crack."

Rather Gave Him Away.

Fond Father (showing off his offspring's intelligence)—Now, Elsie dear, what is a cat?
Elsie—Dunno.
Fond Father—Well, what's that funny little animal that comes creeping up the stairs when every one's in bed?
Elsie (promptly)—Papa.

Not the Donkey He Wanted.

"I see you advertise for a donkey," said the man who looked as if he had something for sale.
"Oh, yes," said the busy man, stopping his work for a minute to look up, "but I want one with four legs."—Boston Journal.

Revenge.

"That fat man," complained the scales, "simply knocked me all out of kilter."
"Well," replied the candy machine near by, "now you can lie in weight for the next one that comes along."—Philadelphia Press.

Love.

When a man ceases to love he is lost. Love implies a hope of higher, more reverend things. Baseness despises love, for love is good and is incompatible with grossness.

STONEGRAVE OVERMAN

(Original.)
"Are you the manager?"

"I am, sir. How did you get in here? I directed the attendant to admit no one."

"Never mind that. I am here to read you a play, a play in which there is a great deal of money, a play!"

"Leave it. I will read it."

"Give me five minutes of your time. I will read you the first lines. Then you can finish it at your leisure."

Without waiting for permission, the stranger, a tall, spare man, with pointed mustache and chin tuft, a glittering black eye and a hook nose, began to recite without referring to the manuscript the opening lines of his play. Never before had the manager heard such versatility in the assumption of different characters. Now the reader was the loving father, now the innocent girl, the hopeful man of twenty-one. Into all these he infused the individuality of the part, but when he came to the principal character, the villain, his listener was lost in wonder. Presently the reader stopped, took out his watch and said:

"The time I asked is up."

"Go on."

The reading proceeded, and when the play was finished the manager, astounded at the vigor of the play and the genius of the reader, asked for his name.

"My name is Stonegrave Overman. I think I have satisfied you that I can write a play. At the first rehearsal I shall satisfy you that I can act a part."

"You will personate?"

"The villain."

In half an hour the playwright left the theater with a contract, and in two weeks the play was produced, with Stonegrave Overman cast for the principal part.

"What a singular name!" exclaimed every one. "Stonegrave Overman! Who is the man anyway? I don't find any of the theatrical profession who ever heard of him."

When the star came on, notwithstanding there was something forbidding in his personnel, he soon captured his audience. He was a villain—it was plain that he was a villain—and yet he was a seductive villain who made the part which had been constructed to show the superiority of virtue contemptible. The man who played this virtuous role had long been a favorite on the stage and was noted for the effectiveness with which he would declare a noble sentiment. And yet tonight his efforts seemed to be strained. Try as he would he could not infuse into his many opportunities for making "the good" seem adorable the necessary vim. Beside the stranger, with his insinuating villainies, he seemed to dwindle either into insignificance or pharisaical cant or both.

In the third act, wherein was the climax of the play, the air without had become heavy laden and a fierce storm came on. A wild wind howled, the lightning blazed, the thunder crashed. This commotion of the elements seemed to inspire the star with genius. While the other actors and the audience were trembling he glided about the stage as if stimulated by refreshing drafts of sparkling wine. His wit, his sarcasm, all those speeches that were thrown in to give effectiveness and charm to his part, fairly scintillated. Once several of the audience, those with remarkably acute eyesight, thought they saw a myriad of faint sparks encircling the actor, which they attributed to the electrical condition of the atmosphere.

Suddenly there came a remarkable change. During a momentary lull in the storm when the star was addressing the man of the noble part with a merciless satire that was making him cringe in spite of himself, lowering his voice and pausing to render the last word effective, there came the faint sound of a distant bell. Whether it denoted the celebration of a mass, a tolling for the dead, whatever it was, the actor seemed transfixed. From the hold, devil may care creature whose resplendent acts and words were throwing the good into shadow he became in a twinkling a whipped spaniel. There were three strokes of the bell, indicating that it signaled the elevation of the host. At the first the actor cringed, at the second drew back a step toward a wing close beside him and at the third passed behind it. During the whole of the retreat he was still the trembling dog, with its tail between its legs, cowering before the raised whip of its master.

Something had gone wrong, but nobody knew what it was. The stage manager had the presence of mind to ring down the curtain. Later he came before the audience to announce that the star had suffered a physical collapse and the play would not go on.

Behind the scenes all was commotion. Some one turned out the lights, though in the investigation that followed no one would admit having done so. The stage manager directed a call boy to go for a doctor, then hurried to the wing behind which the star had retreated. When he reached the spot it was dark as Erebus. He called and receiving no response groped about, expecting to find the actor on the floor. Then the lights were turned on, but the stricken man was not there.

For months there was incessant dispute as to who the strange playwright and actor was. Some said he was an escaped lunatic who fancied himself the devil. Others declared that the whole affair had been overacted, those present having been worked upon by the storm. A few who even in these enlightened times believe in the personality of Satan maintained that the man was really the devil.

—During the winter of 1901, R. O. Bell, Pontiac, Ill., contracted a severe cold which left him with a very annoying cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says, "I had been suffering from the effects of la grippe followed by a severe cough for several weeks last winter, and had tried nearly every remedy known to myself or friends, but found no relief up to the time I began using Harts' Honey and Horehound. I received benefit even from the first bottle of this medicine, and three 25c bottles effectually cured me. There are no deleterious effects following its use and I consider Harts' Honey and Horehound the best throat and lung remedy in the world." Sold by Sam Church.

WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.]

Attorney General Knox looks forward to the time when he will live in California, the poppy land of rest and refreshment, where strikes and mergers and anthracite mix up sound far off, as in a dream. He has invested in land at Santa Barbara, within sound of the old mission bells, and in due time, when the trusts are "busted" and the wicked are laid low, he will build him a castle of indolence and lay down his troubled oar.

Mr. Knox has spent several winters in southern California and has returned each time with reluctance to the strife of modern times. It is not generally known that the attorney general of the United States is a poet of exquisite though modest taste and that in a strictly quiet way he presented "sugared sonnets to his private friends" rivaling those of the poets of more romantic days. Some experts have gone so far as to assert that the laurel and the bay belong to Attorney General Knox rather than to the poet who pre sides over the department of state.

National Museum's New Home.
The first step has been taken toward erecting a suitable home for the National museum. This important and popular institution has been greatly cramped for years for a suitable building in which to exhibit the wonders and curiosities that have been gathered under the direction of the government. Congress was made to realize the necessity for a new building and made adequate appropriations. A contract has been made with a firm of architects for the plans and specifications of the new structure, which is to cost $3,500,000. Only general plans of the new home of the museum have been decided upon, and before the actual construction begins some of the most noted museums of the world will be visited and studied. In the meantime rests will be made of the ground on which the building is to be erected, its location having been fixed between Ninth and Twelfth streets, or just about where the present one story structure now stands, adjoining the Smithsonian institution. It will take three years to erect the building.

Discriminating Gratitude.
The pension bureau has discovered a Brooklyn woman with more real, if unconscious, humor to the square inch than many a professional after dinner talker. She is the widow of a New Yorker who fought and bled for his country, and she had waited long for the stipend Uncle Sam passes out as a small token of the republic's gratitude. At last the government has granted her a pension, and the patient applicant has acknowledged the tardy action in the following note:

Brooklyn, May the 17th, 1903.
Commissioner of Pensions:
I wish to express my Grattud and thanks to you and all concerned for my Pension and to God who has given me Patience and Courage to wait. Respectfully,
Mrs ———

Coal Dealers Must Reimburse.
Uncle Sam is not to suffer any loss through the coal famine of last winter if a decision rendered by the comptroller of the treasury is sustained and enforced. It is the practice for the government to make contracts for its coal supply everywhere. Few of these contracts were filled while the dealers were receiving fancy prices for the precious fuel last winter. In many instances the government had to enter the market as a competitor with the citizens and buy its coal where it could be had at any price demanded. The comptroller in his decision holds that the government can compel the coal dealers who contracted to furnish it coal to reimburse it and pay into the treasury the difference between the contract price of coal and the price the government was forced to pay.

Working Overtime Printing Money.
The presses at the bureau of engraving and printing are running twenty-four hours a day printing money. The run is on new national bank notes. It takes about twenty-five days to prepare new money for the banks so that it will be properly "seasoned" to go into the hands of the public. The banks have orders ahead for many millions, and the circulation is being delivered to the comptroller by wagon loads each day. From the comptroller's office it is shipped to the banks upon the deposit of bonds covering the amount to be shipped. The circulation of national banks of the United States has passed the $400,000,000 mark, the largest amount in their history.

Must Remove Evil Influences.
Acting Secretary of the Navy Darragh has directed that the Pacific squadron, which was ordered to the Bremerton (Wash.) yards for docking, remain in San Francisco until the department is assured that the Bremerton town council has wiped out the notorious resorts just outside the gates. In addition, the department will discontinue all work at Bremerton until the place has been cleared of evil characters. It is the determination that American sailors shall not be subjected to evil influences such as are said to flourish at the Bremerton yards. Such vessels as cannot be docked at the Mare Island navy yard will be sent to Atlantic stations.

Has Closed Her House.
Mrs. Shaw, wife of the secretary of the treasury, has closed her Washington house for the summer, although she and her daughters will return here from Iowa for a few days before sailing for Europe July 2. Mrs. Shaw is now at Mount Vernon, Ia.

The Pacific Cable.
The Pacific cable will be completed to Manila July 1. That is the information conveyed to the department by the cable company.

So much is heard of the different treatments and cures for nearly all the ills to which man is heir, or thinks he is, that possibly interest will be shown in the machine recently designed by a southerner, seemingly to produce an effect exactly the reverse from the rest cure which has been preached in recent years. This new apparatus will give the movement cure, actually pummeling the different parts of the body until the disease is supposed to be hammered out and the healthy tissue renewed.

The patient to be treated reclines on a special couch, fitted with very flexible springs. Mounted on a vertical standard beside the couch is an electric motor, to which is attached a flexible shaft, through the medium of which movement is imparted to an eccentric. As the eccentric revolves it oscillates a vertical shaft with short, sharp strokes, and on the lower end of this shaft is the pummeling device, which is preferably of pneumatic construction, with means for varying the degree of hardness to suit the condition of the flesh to be treated.

Says Corsets Cause Appendicitis.
The death in Paris of the Comtesse Louise de Talleyrand-Perigord, following a very serious operation, calls attention to the great number of society women who have been serious ill, including Princesse de Wagram, Vicomtesse Antoine de Contades, Mme. Alfred de la Ville le Roux, Mlle. de France and Mme. Waldeck-Rousseau. Several have had operations for appendicitis. Recently a professor of the faculty of medicine was asked how he accounted for this, and he said:
"It is all due to the present fashionable corset, the pressure of which displaces the abdomen, impeding digestion."

Typhoid Antitoxin.
Dr. Allan MacFadyen of the Jenner institute in London has succeeded, by first freezing typhoid bacilli to a hard and brittle state with liquid air, in so pulverizing them that an extract of the toxin contained in the cell substance can be obtained. Experiments have already been made with this extract which indicate that a valuable remedy for the treatment of typhoid fever can be prepared by its use.

Epilepsy Goes With Hydrophobia.
It is related in Vienna that a high Serbian official, afflicted with epilepsy, recently went to the Pasteur institute at Budapest for treatment for hydrophobia. Under the Pasteur treatment the wound caused by the bite of the dog soon healed, and with this cure his epilepsy also disappeared. The case is attracting much interest in medical circles.

The proposed demonstration at Lansing, Mich., of Bion J. Arnold's new system of electric railway construction is only another one of several demonstrations and tests which are slowly and apparently surely paving the way toward the future abandonment of steam as the motive power in land passenger transportation. The system is known as "electro pneumatic," and it is promised for it that it will reduce the cost of equipment from 20 to 40 per cent. Substations are to be done away with, thus effecting a large saving in labor.

In brief, the system "eliminates the present rotary converter substation system" and operates "by means of a high tension working conductor, carrying the current to a single phase alternating current motor by means of which the car is driven directly by the motor without the use of the direct current."

Much of the energy which is now dissipated through the stopping and starting of cars will be conserved under the new system, it is said, because the speed is to be controlled by compressed air, and the energy otherwise lost is stored and may be used later as if the car were equipped with a storage battery.

This storage of energy makes it possible to detach the cars from the main line, disconnect the conductor and with the stored power do necessary switching without the use of energy from the power house.

Consumption of Railroad Ties.
The annual demand for railway ties is 400 for each mile of track, and the average life of a tie is seven years. It is an unusual acre of forest that has 200 trees that will make three ties each and last 21 years. The ties are made of the best material.

Burning the Dead.

Cremation has been practiced by most of the nations of the earth from the earliest ages, and, although in pagan countries it may have taken the form of fire worshipping there can be no doubt that its adoption by the ancients was for the most part prompted by other than religious reason. Greeks ascribe its introduction to Hercules, who, having sworn to transmit the body of Argus to his father, thought this the most convenient way of fulfilling his promise. According to Homer, the burning of the dead was a common practice among the Greeks long before the Trojan war, but the earliest record of it is among the Scythians, who inhabited the vast region known under the name of Tartary. Slender accounts handed down concerning the manners of some of the ancient natives of Hindustan also allude to the custom. The idea of purification by fire was in all ages universal, and with good reason. Some believed that the body was unclean after the departure of the soul, and it was therefore deemed necessary that it should be purified by fire. Ovid expressed the general opinion of his time when he said that the soul was not completely separated from the body until the latter was consumed on the pyre. The Athenians invariably after a battle burned the slain.

An Economical Man.

A commercial traveler tells of a man who was riding on a train and pretended to become ill after eating a sandwich. The man opened his grip and took out a hot water bag. "He got a sympathetic porter," the commercial man continues, "to fill the water bag with boiling water and then he opened up his lunch basket, took out a piece of fried steak and warmed it up on the water bag. You talk about your light housekeeping! Then, after he had warmed the steak, he cut it all up with a pair of scissors and fed it to himself with a pair of sugar tongs, because he would not take a chance with a fork going around a curve. But his finish was a limit. After he had eaten the steak he unscrewed the stopper of the water bag and poured himself out a cup of hot coffee. He had the grounds in the bag all the time."

An Early Day Railroad Wreck.

In the early days of the road there was a smash up, and all were badly shaken up. The next morning a burly farmer limped into the superintendent's office and said, "Mr. Superintendent, I came in to see what you were going to give me for shaking me up so yesterday." The superintendent asked how much he thought he ought to have for his injuries. "Well, I think it worth 50 cents, and I will settle for that." The superintendent replied that it was quite a sum, but as the man seemed honest he would pay him, and he did so, taking his receipt in full. The superintendent said, "I will be liberal with you and give you a pass to take you home." "No, you won't. As long as these pins—slapping his legs—last I won't go on your darn railroad any more."—National Magazine.

Prevention of Corns.

There are suggestions without number for the cure of corns. Any reputable chiropodist and some who are not reputable can furnish an unfailing remedy. But there is one sure way to prevent them. Don't wear the same pair of shoes two days in succession. Corns are caused by friction on the toes, and the most expert bootmaker cannot make two pairs of shoes which will rub the feet in the same place. The change of shoes gives the feet a chance to rest. It is also good for the shoes, and footwear which is treated in this fashion will last much longer than if put to daily use.

The Crocodile.

Pliny said the crocodile's skin "will abide any injury and not be pierced." That may have been true in his day, but it is not true now. The bullet of a heavy modern rifle will pierce the skin anywhere unless it strikes in a slanting direction. The crocodile is not as a rule hard to kill, provided one can get a good shot at it, but that is just the trouble. It has not the marvelous vitality of the shark, which will sometimes struggle furiously for an hour, although covered with apparently mortal wounds.—Chicago News.

KITCHEN SUPERSTITIONS.

Why Most Cooks Always Stir Their Batter One Way Only.

"Take a good lump of fresh butter and roll it in flour, place it in a lined saucepan with a half pint of good, rich cream, stir it gently over a low fire, always the same way, till it begins to simmer."

This recipe for the making of melted butter is quoted from an old fashioned cookery book of a century ago, but the direction to stir "always the same way" is observed as religiously today as it was then, and probably will be for a thousand years to come.

All cooks of all nations stir not only the same way, but also from east to west, a sure indication that the practice originated with sun worshippers.

Speaking of stirring brings to mind that in most English households—country ones at least—the practice of the whole family joining to stir the Christmas plum pudding is still in vogue.

There are many peculiar, old fashioned superstitions connected with cooking.

For instance, in Scotland, when oat-cakes are being baked, it is still customary to break off a little piece and throw it into the fire.

At one time, whenever a baking was made—which was perhaps once a month only—a cake was made with nine knobs on it. Each of the company broke one off, and, throwing it behind him, said, "This I give to thee; preserve thou my sheep," mentioning the name of a noxious animal—fox, wolf or eagle.

A roast pheasant is usually sent up with the tail feathers. This practice is a memorial of the days when a peacock was skinned before roasting and when cooked was sewed into its plumage again, its beak gilded and so served.

Tossing the pancake is another interesting food superstition. Formerly the master of the house was always called upon to toss the Shrove Tuesday pancake. Usually he did it so clumsily that the contents of the pan found their way to the floor, when a fine was demanded by the cook. The custom is still kept up at Westminster school, where a pancake is tossed over the bar and scrambled for. The one who secures it is rewarded with a guinea.

The origin of the cross on hot cross buns is a matter of dispute. There is little doubt that cakes partly divided into four quarters were made long before the Christian era. At one time it was believed that bread baked on Good Friday would never grow moldy, and a piece of it grated was kept in every house, being supposed to be a sovereign remedy for almost any kind of ailment to which man is subject.

In many parts of England it is considered unlucky to offer a mince pie to a guest. It must be asked for.—Boston Journal.

Ancient Beds.

In ancient times the beds we read about were simply rugs, skins or thin mattresses which could be rolled up and carried away in the morning. At night they were spread on the floor, which in the better class of houses was of tile or plaster, and as the shoes were not worn in the house and the feet were washed before entering a room the floors were cleaner than ours. After a time a sort of bench, three feet wide, was built around two or three sides of the room about a foot above the floor and, covered with a soft cushion, was used during the day to sit or lounge on and as a sleeping place at night. The bench was sometimes made like a settee, movable and of carved wood or ivory.—London Standard.

No Sense of Proportion.

The young man who had spent his efforts for several years without result in studying art was talking with his practical uncle, who had patiently paid the bills.

"Of course," said the young artist, "I know I haven't made much of a go of it, but I don't think you ought to advise me to try something else. You know it's best to put all your eggs in one basket and watch that basket."

"Um! That may be, Charlie; but did you ever think how foolish it is to put so many baskets around one bantam egg?"—Youth's Companion.

The Great Porcelain Tower.

In 1430 A. D., after nineteen years of ceaseless labor and an expenditure of about £800,000, the Chinese government finished the wonderful porcelain tower at Nankin, which stood for nearly four and a quarter centuries, until 1856, the most marvelous building ever erected by human hands. It was of octagonal form, 260 feet in height, with nine stories, each having a cornice and a gallery without.

Cholly's Repartee.

"Cholly is so clever at repartee!" exclaimed Clarence.

"Isn't he?" said Reginald. "What's his latest?"

"A gweat, howwid bwute said to him, 'You are the biggest fool in this state.' And Cholly answered wight off, 'I don't agree with you!'"—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Two Effects.

"I never send out a story for publication," said Dullpath, the realist, "without first having slept over it."

"I don't believe I've ever read one of them either without doing the same thing," returned Hawley.

Unmusical Wolves.

An incident just reported from Sivas, Turkey, seems to prove that the feeling which music awakens in wolves is fright. Two musicians—a drummer and piper—returning to their village from a wedding party were overtaken by a snowstorm and sought refuge in a deserted mill. They lit a fire with some wood they found in the place and were warming themselves when they saw a wolf emerge from a dark corner of the building. They jumped up on a shelf and, to their dismay, saw several more wolves join the first. The animals rushed in their direction, and the drummer, at a loss for a mode of defense, set to beating his drum, whereupon his companion instinctively played his pipe. The effect was marvelous. The music so terrified the wolves that they attempted to run away, and as the door was closed, they began fighting, and several of them were torn to pieces, the survivors eventually escaping through a hole in the wall. This incident is vouched for by the Government Gazette of Sivas.

A Pickled Traveler.

A traveler in Tartary tells the following story of a corpulent Greek servant who accompanied him: "At the end of the third day the well seasoned kavass in attendance, whose whole life had been passed in the saddle, came, with a smile, to report that Gurgis was unable to proceed from abrasion, as the doctors called it, of the epidermis. 'He can't be left behind, sir, in the desert,' added the old beirakdar, 'so, with your leave, we will give him the Tartar bath.' A tub of the strongest brine was accordingly prepared, in which the unfortunate Gurgis was forthwith immersed, uttering the most appalling howls at the first plunge, but subsiding shortly afterward and eventually after half an hour's tanning coming out so effectively case hardened that he rode a further thousand miles to the Black sea in the course of the next week without showing a symptom of distress."

The Latin Quarter of Today.

The Latin quarter of today is as full of individual character as the same ground in the middle ages. One writer says Paris only possesses two really marked individualities, the student and the grisette. Not but that student life is always changing its outward semblance, just as the university structures themselves are changing theirs.

Since the days of Abelard Paris has grown from a town of 40,000 inhabitants clustering around a little island to one of 3,000,000, covering almost a whole province, but the students are still the soul of the city. When Paris makes merry or mourns, the students lead the way. It is the Latin quarter which sets the fashion in ideas, as the Champs Elysees in dress.—Scribner's Magazine.

Political Burglaries.

It was through a stolen document, openly seized by the British ambassador in Berlin, that the British government first learned of the recognition of the independence of America by France. The British minister was Hugh Elliot, and he had the desk of the French minister forced open to obtain the copy of the treaty he wanted. In 1855 a sensation was created by the discovery of a plan by which secret documents were systematically abstracted from the Russian embassy in Berlin, being copied at night in the interests of another nation and replaced in the drawer at the embassy in the morning. The burglaries had been taking place for two years before they were discovered.
